PM eyes alliance with NDP

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said today he supports the idea of a parliamentary alliance with the New Democratic Party to provide his Liberal government with representation in Western Canada.

He confirmed at a press conference that approaches proposing a form of coalition have been made to the NDP, which has 27 members from the four Western provinces. The Liberals hold only two seats west of Ontario, both in Manitoba.

While the NDP has spurned the approaches and some Liberals oppose an alliance, Trudeau said, "it is not an idea that has horrified me."

Trudeau said a Liberal-NDP alliance appeals to him "particularly in circumstances where the NDP is very strong in some parts of Canada and we are very strong in others and at a time when national unity does call for the support of people of all parts of the country for the government of the day."

"I think it would be an acceptable idea to have some form of a working alliance."

Trudeau gave no details of when and by whom approaches were made to the NDP, nor whether the proposed alliance would have included bringing NDP MPs into his cabinet.

He observed that when his government held a minority of Commons seats between 1972 and 1974, there were shifting alliances on parliamentary votes with the NDP and the Conservatives because "we knew that the people didn't want a quick election.

"Perhaps the Tories' failure in the last Parliament is that they didn't realize that."

Trudeau also said today it is important for non-aligned countries as well as Western governments to protest the Soviet Union invasion of Afghanistan by boycotting the Moscow Olympics.

A boycott likely won't get the Soviet troops out of Afghanistan, but the Soviet Union must "be made to remember by whatever action we take that it loses a lot of friends, not only amongst Western countries."

Trudeau said he couldn't promise a decision before the visit Wednesday of American State Secretary Cyrus Vance but he hoped to decide before next weekend's annual meeting of the Canadian Olympic Association.

Trudeau also said today he has warned Liberal MPs and cabinet ministers that although he plans to quit before the next election, he doesn't want them campaigning for the leadership before he announces his retirement date.

"If anybody jumped the gun I certainly would look with displeasure on that", he said.

"Which really means that though I can't designate my successor as head of the Liberal party, I can sure make it difficult for anybody to succeed me if he tries to push me out too soon."

Yarrows workmen are wearing protective masks and other measures — including installation of a system to clean the air — have been taken to avoid an asbestos hazard during the refit of the Queen of Prince Rupert.

The Rupert is docked at Yarrows, undergoing a refit to prepare for service on the Victoria-Seattle run.

Esquimalt Port Renfrew NDP MLA Frank Mitchell claimed Thursday dust and flakes from asbestos sprayed on the metal of the ship's interior years ago to stop condensation were being shaken down, creating a health hazard for the workers.

When cabin ceilings were ripped out during renovations, the particles entered the air.

"The whole area was literally a fog of white. No one was aware of the danger. To clear the air, someone turned on the internal air conditioning system in the ship and the asbestos spread through the whole system."

In addition, a vaccuum system has been installed to suck out and change the air.

Asbestos dust can cause serious lung disorders and skin irritation.

Mitchell said the air conditioning system must be thoroughly cleaned out and the circulating air tested to make sure it is clear of asbestos contamination, before the Rupert starts carrying passengers again.

Meanwhile, the chairman of a provincial committee looking into the use of asbestos in B.C. school construction has announced it will look into work practices relating to handling of asbestos.

In addition, the committee will also examine commercial and public buildings built or renovated in the Vancouver area between 1950 and 1973.

The scope of the inquiry was announced Thursday by Jim Edgett, chairman of the six-member committee.

The committee, which represents the WCB as well as the ministries of health, education and labor, was formed after concern was expressed about the health hazard present in public buildings where asbestos had been used.

Edgett, executive director of the labor relations and standards branch, said the committee's purpose is to find out the extent of asbestos use in schools and public buildings and whether or not there is any health hazard.

Initially the committee will study schools in the following school districts: Vernon, Shuswap, Vancouver, Prince Rupert, Nanaimo and Maple Ridge.

The decision to look at commercial and public buildings was made at a committee meeting earlier this week.

The reason only those buildings built or renovated between the years 1950 and 1973 are to be studied is that after that time the use of asbestos in construction was stopped, Edgett said.

Because of the complicated nature of the study and the difficulty in getting information, the investigation is going to be a lengthy one, he added.

$4M gem heist in Tel Aviv

TEL AVIV (AP) — In the biggest robbery in Israel's history, a daring bandit invaded the Tel Aviv headquarters of the Jewish state's diamond industry today and took gems valued at up to $4.5 million, police said.

Shortly after the unidentified bandit fled the 13th-floor office of diamond merchant Menachem Hershkovitz, police sealed off the two-building exchange and began searching the employees one by one.

Police said they are not sure whether the robber, armed with a pistol and a hand grenade, succeeded in escaping the exchange before it was sealed off.

Many of the 3,000 employees in the exchange were delayed in returning home for the Jewish sabbath by the exhaustive search.

Exchange president Moshe Schnitzer refused to place a value on the stolen gems, but police provided an estimate.

Millions of dollars in transactions take place daily in the giant exchange and officials pride themselves on the strictest security precautions obtainable. Schnitzer said the robbery was the first at the exchange since it was built in 1968.

There were no injuries reported.

Wine, beer sales may go private

The provincial government is considering setting up specialty wine stores as a first step to private enterprise wine and beer sales, Consumer Affairs Minister Jim Nielsen said today.

Nielsen said it is inevitable some of the beer and wine distribution now handled by provincial liquor stores will be given to other merchants and that radio and television liquor advertising — now prohibited in B.C. — will be allowed.

However, he refused to say when new regulations might be introduced.

"It could be much quicker than some people anticipate — it could be longer than some people desire," he said.

Nielsen said his ministry is considering several alternatives to the present distribution of wine but individual specialty stores likely will come before wine and beer in grocery stores.

"We'll be opening up a liquor store in Vancouver in August which will have the best selection of wines of any store across the country," he said.

"The natural evolution would be to set up individual specialty shops but you have to be sure first that you're not going to have some little store where a guy is selling two-bit wines."

Nielsen said B.C. wines would always have a prominent place in wines stores but a wide selection of wines would be featured.

He said that while his officials are studying various possibilities for getting wine and beer out of liquor stores, there is no great pressure at the moment (from consumers) to bring this about.

On another matter, Nielsen said liquor advertising on radio and television — long advocated by private broadcasters in B.C. — will eventually occur.

There has been a strong change in attitude, he said, noting that approval recently was given to allow beer to be sold at sporting events in Vancouver.

Nielsen rejected suggestions that advertising of alcohol leads to abuse.

GNP signals recession start

WASHINGTON (AP) — Growth of the U.S. economy slowed sharply in the first three months of 1980, apparently setting the stage for the beginning of a new recession, federal government figures showed today.

The commerce department report said the gross national product grew at an annual rate of 1.1 per cent from January through March, down from a two-per-cent rate of growth in the fourth quarter of 1979.

It also said there was a worsening of inflation to an annual rate of 11.4 per cent in the first quarter of 1980, up from a 9.4-per-cent rate in the fourth. This inflation measurement is different than the consumer price index, which has shown an 18-per-cent rate of increase.

The first-quarter GNP report provided support for recent predictions that a recession may have started in late March or early April.

President Carter said at a news conference Thursday that a recession has probably started, although he predicted it would be short and mild.

The GNP measures the total output of goods and services in the economy and a decline in output for two consecutive quarters is considered a recession. If the recession has started, it wouldn't show up in the GNP statistics until the second-quarter report, which will be issued in July.

The economy expanded during all of 1979 by an average of one per cent, but the Carter administration is predicting a decline of 0.4 per cent this year because of the recession.

Meanwhile, a decline in prime lending rates continued today as Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. of New York, the fifth-largest U.S. bank, cut the rate to 19½ per cent from 20 per cent.

But New York's Citibank, the second-largest bank, cut its rate only to 19¾ per cent.

Two days ago, Chase Manhattan Bank, the third-largest bank, cut its rate to 19¾ per cent. Chase today matched the cut to 19½ per cent as did No. 6 Chemical Bank.

The administration predicts unemployment will rise to 7.2 per cent from the current 6.2 per cent.

What? No overtime?

That's $238,095.23 a day.

The terms of Reynolds contract to appear in Cannonball, announced Thursday, put him ahead of the previous record salary — Marlon Brando's $3.7 million against 11.3 per cent of the gross for 15 days work in Superman in 1978.

REYNOLDS
. . . the new king

Producer Al Ruddy said Golden Harvest Productions, bankrolled by Hong Kong film magnate Raymond Chow, will pay Reynolds the $5 million plus his "usual percentage," which a spokesman for Reynolds identified as 10 per cent of the gross.

"When you get past paying for an actor and into paying for a star, it's an area that's difficult to define," Ruddy said.

"Why $5 million?"

"That's what it took."

Davis swipes at 'brute force' tunnel link

Socred backbencher Jack Davis has criticized a proposal for a tunnel-cum-bridge link between Vancouver Island and the mainland.

The answer to the increase in auto and passenger traffic is more ferries and not a fixed link, says Davis, the MLA for North Vancouver-Seymour.

Davis, in letters sent to the Times and other newspapers, took a hefty swipe at the government's current fascination with tunnels, bridges and floating highways across the Georgia Strait.

"If a short ferry link were added between Vancouver airport and Gabriola Island near Nanaimo we could get to the year 2000 with the same number of ferries we have now," Davis argued.

Davis was responsible for the ferry system when he served as transport minister in the Socred government.

In his letter he said the answer is to add the extra crossing and replace 10 existing ferries with 10 new Cowichan-class jumbo vessels.

"Then we can carry four times as many people and cars as we do now. And we can save the equivalent of one year's provincial taxes in the process."

Davis estimates the cost at $500 million compared to the $3-$5 billion needed for a tunnel-bridge link proposed by former Socred cabinet minister Sam Bawlf and supported by Science Minister Pat McGeer.

"Ferries have it hands down over brute force alternatives like bridges and tunnels," Davis maintained.

McGeer's tunnel talk, however, has found a more responsive audience in the 2,100-member B.C. Construction Association.

President Frank Reder called Thursday for an early start on a feasibility study on the fixed link idea.

It is the only way British Columbians can make a sensible decision, he said.

The cabinet has not yet decided whether it will approve McGeer's request for such a study, estimated to cost between $500,000 and $1 million.

Meanwhile, McGeer Thursday received yet another fixed link proposal to add to his collection, this one from the Dutch firm of Dywidag Canada Ltd.

It calls for a floating tunnel link from the mainland to Gabriola Island, which would be linked to Vancouver Island by a series of short tunnels and bridges.

With an estimated cost of $1.6 billion, it is the cheapest proposal so far.

Sanction support grows but Iran remains defiant

Times News Services

Defiant Iranian leaders, including the Ayatollah Khomeini, declared today their country can resist mounting U.S. economic pressure.

But the sanctions campaign picked up steam among U.S. allies. Portugal Thursday declared sanctions against Iran, and today Australia and Denmark indicated they were ready to close ranks with U.S. President Carter in hopes of obtaining release of 50 U.S.embassy hostages in Tehran.

Khomeini said Iran is not afraid of an economic blockade and called on "men and women, young and old" to be ready to wage a guerrilla war to defend their country.

Iran's revolutionary leader made his scoffing remarks in a speech Thursday that preceded but anticipated new anti-Iran moves by Carter. The U.S. president announced a ban on imports from Iran and travel there by Americans and warned that the only next step for the U.S. "would be some sort of military action."

Khomeini said "Carter's main concern is to be president for another four years in order to commit crimes for another four years.

"It will be disgraceful for Europe to be subservient to Carter in order to gain votes for him."

In his latest series of moves, Carter banned U.S. imports from Iran, ordered the freeing for U.S. use or sale of impounded military equipment purchased by Iran, said he will seek congressional authority to pay reparations to the hostages and their families out of more than $8 billion in Iranian assets he froze in November, barred financial transactions with anyone in Iran, except those involved in journalism, and prohibited U.S. citizens other than journalists from travelling to Iran without U.S. government permission.

Carter also told a news conference in Washington he is considering banning shipments of U.S. food and medicine to Iran and blocking its use of Intelsat, the international communications satellite.

After government meetings today in Copenhagen, Danish Prime Minister Anker Joergensen announced his government is "ready to do everything to support U.S. efforts." He indicated Denmark would not order trade restrictions without first co-ordinating actions with its eight Common Market partners next week.

And in Canberra, officials said the Australian government would probably decide Monday to order at least partial bans on machinery, iron and steel exports to Iran.

The Portuguese government, which imported 21 per cent of its oil from Iran, said the embargo will remain in effect "until the release of the hostages."

Meanwhile, West Germany advised its nationals in Iran to send their families home amid indications the Bonn government would back the U.S. sanctions against Iran even if other nations in the Common Market do not.

Japan has said it will align its policies with those of the EEC, but it has not said what it would do if the European nations cannot reach an agreement.

Tel hike beef going to CRTC

The NDP announced today it will go before the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission to oppose B.C. Tel's application for an interim rate increase.

"We regret the necessity of this intervention," said NDP communications critic Frank Mitchell (Esquimalt-Port Renfrew).

"Because the government has failed to intervene, the NDP opposition has no choice if British Columbian interests are to be looked after."

The party's brief to the CRTC disputes B.C. Tel's financial arguments and accuses the company of sloppy corporate planning as well as providing substandard service.

"B.C. Tel wants this increase so it can pay higher dividends on its shares and attact buyers for a massive share issue slated for late 1980 or early 1981," Mitchell said.

"Fifty-six per cent of those dividends would go to shareholders in Connecticut. The dollars are best left in B.C. in the pockets of the subscribers."

Alberta nurses walk out

About 6,600 nurses began the province-wide walkout at the end of the night shift.

Picket lines were up at many hospitals, including the major ones in Edmonton and Calgary. A number of hospitals — including three in Edmonton and two in Calgary — are not affected by the strike and will attempt to handle the increased workload.

Bank profit curbs studied

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumer affairs department experts have begun examining the tools foreign governments use to curb excess bank profits and the same methods could be applied here, Consumer Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet said Thursday.

He said in an interview he expects to receive a general report on British, French, and U.S. methods of keeping a fair and even balance between the interest rates charged borrowers and the rates paid depositors.

"I have noticed the spread (between the two rates) is always to the banks' advantage," Ouellet said. "My feeling is that we have to establish some parity. But why the hell is it that one comes first and the second one after?

"That spread is just getting larger and larger."

Bob Rae, New Democratic finance spokesman, charged two weeks ago that banks have been too slow to raise the interest paid on deposits while they have been quick to raise lending rates.

The prime lending rate of the chartered banks — that charged to corporate borrowers with the best credit record — is between 17 and 17.25 per cent.

They pay depositors about 13 per cent.

Profits by the country's 10 major banks totalled $1.1 billion in 1979, up 13.2 per cent over the previous year.

The minister did not say if an investigation of Canadian banks is under way and said he didn't begrudge them fair profits.

He said he does not advocate immediately applying such brakes to sky-high profits here but the coming Bank Act revision could include regulations to protect the public against gouging.

"But I would prefer to see the banks do it themselves," he said.

"The banks are a special club," he said. "In the United States there are hundreds of banks — here they are a select club and therefore have a predominance in the market that is very important.

"They are not in a total monopoly situation like some utilities, but they are not far from it. They can literally make or break people."

Military adopting low profile

QUEBEC (CP) — The Canadian armed forces have cancelled all manoeuvres and deployment of military personnel in Quebec for the duration of the referendum campaign, says Brig.-Gen. Francois Richard.

Richard, base commander at nearby Valcartier army base, says the decision was taken to avoid any anxiety in the population during the campaign, which ends May 20.

During this period, all normal military training will take place within base limits and no armored vehicles or light artillery will be seen on the province's highways or in the countryside.

"We do not want to annoy anybody, and we do not want to create situations where people could falsely interpret our activities," Richard said in an interview published today.

The only military vehicles to be seen on provincial highways during the referendum campaign will be soldiers learning to drive.

Salmon talks fear worst

VANCOUVER (CP) — Negotiations began Thursday on B.C. salmon prices and wages amid predictions of poor runs and fears that a market glut will hold down prices.

Talks were scheduled between the Fisheries Association of B.C., representing canneries and freezing plants, the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union and the Native Brotherhood of B.C., which speaks for Indians in the commercial fishery.

Talks Thursday centred on a new contract for union shoreworkers and UFAWU president Jack Nicol said he is seeking an across-the-board increase of $1.50 an hour and premium increases for industry tradesmen.

Nicol said the union is also seeking a 50-cents-an-hour increase in northern differential, which is currently 35 cents an hour.

Nicol said the union is seeking a cost-of-living-adjustment clause and improvements in vacations and statutory holidays.

Rockslide delays minerals

VANCOUVER (CP) — A rockslide that knocked out the White Pass and Yukon Railway near Skagway, Alaska, is forcing the Cyprus Anvil Mining Corp. to tell its customers they will have to wait for scheduled shipments of lead and zinc concentrates, the corporation said Thursday.

Cyprus Anvil operates the biggest mine in the Yukon, producing 9,100 metric tonnes a day at a lead, zinc and silver open-pit operation 240 kilometres north of Whitehorse.

The rockslide on Wednesday, blamed on the spring thaw, damaged a bridge near the port of Skagway, cutting off the rail link to the Yukon. Repairs are expected to take a minimum of three weeks.

Highway crews were working overtime in an effort to open the road between Skagway and Whitehorse early next week to provide an alternate link. The road is closed during the winter and usually does not open until May.

Four fires in Prince George area

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Forestry officials are hoping for rain as four forest fires burn in the Prince George forest region.

Weather officials say this is the driest April in 20 years, the winter snowpack levels seldom went above 70 per cent of normal and all this followed one of the driest falls on record.

Grit favors break law: lawyer

VANCOUVER (CP) — A $135-million copper-molybdenum mine on B.C.'s north coast will be in violation of the federal Fisheries Act when it begins operation in May, 1981, because the owners have obtained special treatment from the federal Liberals, says a lawyer for the Nishga Indians.

Don Rosenbloom charged Thursday that Amax of Canada Ltd. got special treatment from the Liberal cabinet in April, 1979, to allow direct discharge into Alice Arm of 100 million tons of tailings from its mine 150 kilometres north of Prince Rupert.

"Since Amax couldn't meet the specifications of the federal Fisheries Act within a country mile, the cabinet of the Liberal government passed an order-in-council allowing the company to discharge effluent into Alice Arm in excess of all normal regulations," said Rosenbloom.

Police accept

VANCOUVER (CP) — Members of the Vancouver Policemen's Union have voted 66 per cent in favor of a new one-year contract, the union announced Thursday.

The new agreement gives the 929 police officers a 7.59-per-cent wage increase, retroactive to Jan. 1, and an additional 3.68 per cent July 1.

The increases will bring a first class constable's salary to $2,053 a month from $1,845.

Police will also be able to lobby the provincial government for legislation changes to allow retirement at age 50 if there are 25 years of service.

Tram has them up in air

NORTH BEND (CP) — A 44-year-old tramway — the only regular link between Boston Bar and this isolated community — has residents fuming and frightened as it swings above the boiling waters of the Fraser River.

The problem, they say, is that the tram is out of commission almost as often as it runs, and when it does break down passengers can end up stranded mid-cable.

That's what happened last week when a tramload was left dangling for 40 minutes. And when the tram is broken, children and adults are forced to scramble down a steep embankment to tugboats which ferry them across the river.

The tram can carry one vehicle at a time as well, but when it's out of order the only way a vehicle can get to North Bend — a former major CP Rail switching point about 225 kilometres northeast of Vancouver — is along rough forestry roads, a 50-kilometre round trip.

A four-wheel drive vehicle is needed for the trip at the best of times.

By tram the round trip across the canyon takes six minutes.

Parents are afraid an accident will injure or kill their kindergarten-age children who must use the tram each day to go to school.

"On weekends, it's just terrible," says Ms. Brookes. "Sometimes you'll get 40 vehicles waiting on either side and that means long delays."

Residents would like the provincial government to build a bridge across the canyon but agree it would be costly.

Charles Harrington of Boston Bar, whose five-year-old daughter uses the tram every day, said it was built in 1936.

"It ran fairly uneventfully until the highways ministry automated it — the more automatic equipment they had the more trouble the tram had," he said.

Director sentenced in fraud

VANCOUVER (CP) — John Francis Guail, 58, a former director of the B.C. Central Credit Union, has been convicted in county court of three counts of fraud and one count of criminal breach of trust.

Guail, also a former general manager of the Stry Credit Union, was sentenced this week to two years less a day.

He was convicted of defrauding the Stry Credit Union of nearly $56,000 by misrepresenting the value of property and claiming expenses for which he had been reimbursed.

APC acid test

The new process of holding open meetings of the Victoria Advisory Planning Commission had its first acid test on Tuesday evening.

It failed.

The hearing on the rezoning necessary to accommodate the convention centre on the Reid site was little short of a fiasco. It was marked by innumerable points of order, constant heckling, and left a final impression that can only be described as misleading.

Technically and legally, APC chairman Jim Cosh may have been quite right when he ruled that the taxpayers whose dollars will pay for the convention centre have no real "interest in the property" and therefore were not qualified to speak at the meeting.

From a political viewpoint, however, Cosh and his fellow commission members were on very shaky ground in denying the general public a chance to have their say. At best, the procedure appeared to be a case of the use of a technicality to thwart the wishes of a hundred or more citizens. At worst, it appeared to be blatant unfairness.

Cosh should not have to take the blame for what happened, however. While he sat repeatedly defending himself by pointing out he was only following council's orders, Mayor Bill Tindall, council zoning committee chairman Ald. Bob Wright, and two other aldermen — all members of the APC — sat on either side of him in silence. None tried to explain what the rules meant or why they had been established. Neither did they try to amend the procedures — which apparently have never been legally constituted anyway — to make the meeting appear a little more democratic. In fact, not one of them said a word.

In the end, too, the losers will be the APC members. When they sit down behind closed doors to make a decision on the rezoning application, they will have heard from only a narrow band of public opinion: the businessmen whose shops and restaurants surround the Inner Harbor site and who, not unnaturally, think the location for a convention centre is first-rate.

Neither council nor the APC should be distressed at the fact that its procedures for open APC meetings need to be changed. The whole idea of opening up some APC meetings to the public began only three months ago. It is not at all surprising that the first set of rules will need to be amended as the APC learns from the experience of the meetings.

When Mayor Tindall began the process, he said the aim was to allow some public input before the final step of any rezoning. In most cases of private development, that aim is well met by the rules limiting speaking to the property owner and developers and immediate neighbors.

The Reid site rezoning showed, however, that in the cases of some major public projects, the rules have the effect of limiting public input rather than encouraging it.

The idea of open APC meetings remains an excellent one. It will require only a few modifications in the governing rules to ensure that when the next acid test comes, the APC passes with honors.

Spring loaded

It could get even more complicated to be a law-abidding, saltwater sport fisherman.

The Sport Fish Advisory Board has recommended that anglers be limited to 30 chinooks a year — that means knowing your chinooks from cohos, pinks, chums and sockeye.

Although there are hundreds of serious salmon hunters who can tell a chinook from a coho at a boat's length, the vast majority are periodic fishermen who likely have trouble telling a salmon from a flasher (the shiny metal variety) at the same distance. If this new regulation becomes law, simply landing the fish will no longer be enough. The angler must determine just what species he has caught.

Chinooks, for instance, are supposed to have spots on the tail, while cohos don't. But then again cohos can have spots too. If that has you baffled, you can peer into the fish's mouth. Chinooks have black gums while cohos have white gums. But if you are color blind or wearing sun glasses or find the fish won't co-operate in having his gums inspected, you may still not know.

Of course, if you include the time it has taken to get the fish untangled from the net, the hook out of its mouth and inspected the tail and mouth, the salmon might as well be in the oven as back in the water.

But there is the final, definitive name-test. The Chinook has 140 to 185 finger-like projections on the end of the stomach. The Coho has 45 to 50.

For some of us it would be easier, and much less messy, to count to 20 inches — the length limit proposed for under an alternative plan.

Internal warfare threatens Tories

OTTAWA — It was drizzling cold rain last week as one of Joe Clark's former cabinet ministers stared out the window of his new, small office in Parliament's Centre Block.

"My only regret," he said with a little twist of a smile, "is that they didn't move me to a high enough floor to jump from."

It is hard to measure the depression that is running through a political party that spent 16 long years out of power, finally clutched at it for a few brief moments, then let it slip away.

There are people in Clark's office who are already thinking of how the Conservative's seven months in office will look to historians 100 years from now.

Rebuilding necessary

What worries many Tories is the prospect of it being the last blip. If the Conservatives are going to survive as a viable national party, the next year or two are going to be crucial.

The February election left them with an alientated Maritimes — where they suffered from Sinclair Stevens' hatchet approach to economic expansion grants, a hopeless Quebec, a turned-off Ontario, and a reduced power base in the West.

All this for a party that simply does not have nearly as large a core of traditional voters across the country as does its Liberal archrival.

They are left with a country full of dispirited party workers, a leader who runs a distant third between his two competitors in terms of public popularity, and chronic problems with young voters, ethnic voters, and Quebec voters.

Not only have they just lost an election — one Clark aide laments that "I think it's a pretty widely held sentiment that we're going to lose the next one too."

If Clark proves to be the alchemist who can turn this gloom into sunshine he will yank himself out of the footnotes of Canadian history and get his own chapter to boot.

But things may get worse before he has a chance, to wit:

Right now the federal Conservatives have two things going for them —seven provincial governments and the absence of the public split in the party that ennervated it throughout the Stanfield years.

Clark's greatest contribution to the party to date has been to heal temporarily that rift. But — if he didn't have enough problems — its spectre has returned.

The problem, as defined by Party President Bob Coates, is that Clark alienated the party by establishing his own power clique around him as soon as he became prime minister — both in his office and his cabinet — and treated the rest of the party as nothing more than a vehicle for the political experiments of his friends and favorites, which incidentally didn't work so well.

Whether most people in the party feel that way is an open question. What is important for the moment is that Coates and some other veteran Conservative MPs do, and while Coates may be deluding himself in thinking that he represents the mainstream of party thinking he is certainly capable of causing enough disruption at an annual meeting to crack Clark's fragile hold on the leadership.

Clark got off to a terrible start with the veterans in his federal caucus by virtually ignoring them when he formed his cabinet. One has no idea what a slap that was at the old-timers unless one spent a decade and more watching them stolidly fight the good parliamentary fight against the mighty and invincible Liberals, hoping against hope that one day their time would come.

When it finally did, it had gone. Clark filled his cabinet with young men — many of whom performed badly in their portfolios - and frontbench veterans such as Eldon Woolliams wobbled away from Ottawa unrewarded for their years of agony.

Everything went well when Clark was leader but before he was elected prime minister. Coates did have to complain at one point that people in Clark's office were trying to sabotage his influence in the party, but he was satisfied that Clark responded to his complaints by slapping his adversaries down.

During the time Clark was prime minister, however, Coates says he was called in to give advice on on exactly one occasion.

And while Coates can tell his friends all this rolls off his back as far as his own ego is concerned ("the best favor Joe Clark ever did for me was not put me in the cabinet — now I'm not part of the debacle") — he obviously feels not only hurt, but cheated.

It may have been passable politics to ignore Coates and his elderly comrades if you were going to hold onto power for several years, impressing people at the riding level with your cleverness and giving the bitter ones a chance to slip grumbling into senility.

Seven months wasn't nearly long enough.

Coates and his colleagues don't have all that much adrenaline to spare that they want to squander it on helping push Clark back into power unless they've got some guarantee that they, and their ilk, aren't going to be ignored next time.

Coates' minimal demand in holding off an assault against Clark — his half pound of flesh, as it were — seems to be Bill Neville's head.

ROBERT COATES
. . . questions leadership

Neville, as Clark's chief of staff, is Coates' symbol of how the Clark government was structured around Johnny-come-latelys who could have cared less about the party.

Clark is desperately trying to hold onto Neville, who is his most trusted aide.

The Clark people would like to hold and survive an early leadership test at an annual general meeting this fall and perhaps topple Coates from the party leadership at the same time — or at least bolster the party's national executive with more Clark loyalists, using the argument that the party needs the type of executive that will go out in search of younger, less small-c conservative members so Clark can expand its loyalty base.

Says Neville: "There's no anti-Bob Coates campaign going on around here. But one has to ask, when our need is not only to consolidate what we have but to rechart and build anew, is our present national executive — and it's not one man, it's a group — are those the kind of people who can reach out well enough."

The Clark people might be able to dismiss Coates as a neanderthal eccentric, if it weren't for the fact that they don't have much of a record of their own to fall back on, and Coates has more than proven his loyalty to the party.

Despite a few indiscreet utterances now and then, designed to prove he can still make an impact, Coates has proven his loyalty to the party by submerging his Diefenbaker loyalties and helping promote party unity.

Even Neville admits: "In the fall of 1977, Coates did a valuable and useful job. He was able to reach a constituency in the party that had tended to be a disquieting factor in earlier periods and quieted it down."

If Clark does change Neville and other members of his senior staff he may only make himself more vulnerable if a strong contingent of the party starts going after his job, which it will be sorely tempted to if the Liberals come up with a fresh new leader to replace Pierre Trudeau.

Coates' gamble

But if he doesn't, he is going to have to square off against Coates. Coates would probably announce his resignation from the party presidency as an opening gambit, arguing that Clark and his people have put themselves above the party and are impossible to work with.

"If he makes no major changes, they won't have to worry about getting rid of me — I won't be interested in staying."

If Coates steps down, it will not before he vents his spleen and makes a determined effort to dump Clark. It is debatable whether Clark would have enough strength in the party to last long under that kind of pressure.

Whether Clark survived or fell the party would be split again, removing the last entry on the plus side of the ledger besides the existence of the seven provincial governments.

And children may be asking their grandparents whether they remember the Blue Blip, and what the Conservatives were like.

Getting worse

We are just leaving your city following a pilgrimage we have been making to Victoria for the past ten years or so.

Your city is always so attractive and friendly, and the beautiful flower boxes and quaint antique shops are always an enticement to explore the downtown area.

However, I was very disappointed in our visits the past two years. Last year it was the carnival-like atmosphere which prevailed on the Causeway leading from the ferries to the downtown area. Wading through popcorn, paper and all kinds of litter amongst less than clean vendors who were hawking their wares like some kind of midway proved a less than enjoyable experience.

This recent visit we saw your beautiful plants torn from their roots and strewn about the sidewalk by mindless vandals, and as we proceeded along your main waterfront street we were constantly beset by the screeching and whining of youthful mendicants playing their instruments on every corner.

Surely Victoria doesn't have to tolerate this sad situation on its streets.

Walking on the lower Causeway, we were panhandled, and made the embarassing object of some very obscene language when we declined to offer our "spare change" to the unkempt vagabonds who were openly drinking and pestering passers-by.

Whatever has happened to the Victoria we used to know? We love your city, but please Victorians, don't let it go the way of so many others. — Dr. and Mrs. B. M. Lever, Portland, Oregon.

Boycott Moscow

The article "Games Too Valuable To Kill" by Philip Noel-Baker, April 3, must be regarded as a classic — how a polished and clever writer can dodge the real issue and give a wrong stand a crown of glory.

To use the argument "because United States were awarded the Winter Games while involved in the Vietnam war" does not make it right, although it does set a precedent. A fact should be observed that U.S. leaves a country after it is stablized, while the Kremlin warmongers go in to stay and control the people without any free votes.

A sanction against the Games to be held in Moscow is too late to help Afghanistan but it can be a powerful deterrent and may even prevent a country from Africa or South America to become snared into the communistic trap. Those countries look toward all the Western countries for guidance and if we bestow honor and prestige toward Moscow they think Communism must be alright.

Should parents let their children play games at a home if that family was involved in the underworld killings? Of course not. So also should the government set a standard and denounce killings by its honors and decisions. — John Jorgensen, 1306 Grant Street.

Planning problems

The concern expressed by many Victorians over the site of the proposed conference centre underlines several serious limitations in the planning process of the city.

First, there is no comprehensive plan for the Inner Harbor and as a result the commercial pressure groups are gradually transforming the area in their own image; the harbor is in danger of being walled off from the city and turned into a commercial strip.

Secondly, the ad hoc development of the harbor goes on with little or no traffic studies, no cost-benefit studies and no effort whatsoever to gain an expression or consensus from the citizens at large. It is development by surprise.

Thirdly, and equally serious, the leadership of the city's planning and zoning committee is in my opinion, much too involved in land and tourist development to avoid what is tantamount to a conflict of interest. Alderman Bob Wright, the chairman of planning, is a vigorous and industrious representative on council — but he should not be planning and zoning chairman. He owns the Undersea Gardens, Sealand, the London Buses, downtown motel units and downtown land for development. Council undoubtedly benefits from the participation of this dynamic alderman but as chairman of planning and zoning he cannot in my opinion be without a conflict of interest.

During my last term of office, a similar concern developed and the alderman in question was removed in the interest of sound government. The same action should be taken by the present mayor.

At the same time, council should hold public meetings to at least hear an expression of opinion from the concerned citizens of Victoria. We are building our city for the next hundred years. Should we not build it with utmost care? The utmost priority in the planning of the Inner Harbor must be how these developments will impact on the well-being of the growing population and the thousands of tourists — Peter Pollen, 3470 Upper Terrace.

For suckers

This coming summer former heavyweight boxing champion, Muhammed Ali, is going to return to the ring. The last time Ali boxed officially was Sept. 15, 1978, when he barely outpointed one Leon Spinks, a pugilist of rather shabby credentials — in the ring and elsewhere.

Ali was 36½ years old when he last performed, but he has squandered most of his fortune and desperately needs one more big payday. So, the P.T. Barnums of the boxing world have set up what is always ballyhooed as "the fight of the century", Ali versus Mike Weaver. Weaver is one of two heavyweight champions in da whole wide woild, and although not exactly a great heavyweight, should be able to give Ali a fairly good whuppin' — unless the fix is on or a trigger is cocked. Ali is too old, too flabby and too slow.

This upcoming "fight of the century" will only be shown on closed circuit TV, and one can be sure that millions of people will spend like suckers to see Ali and Weaver. One can also be sure that the day after the fight, most of the suckers will be grumbling about the price of food, gas or something else necessary. — John Wickstrom, 3264 Shelley Street.

Courting disaster

The ludicrous idea of a tunnel as link to the mainland blatantly ignores the well-known earthquake zone we live with. This is courting inevitable disaster.

We lived at Courtenay when the 1945 earthquake struck. It must be a matter of record that the center of Read Island dropped twenty feet, the ocean floor rose several feet along Kye Beach area, white sand bubbled up through farm fields, houses were shifted and a rocky point dropped into the sea.

We heard the quake coming and ran to a clear field for safety but the earth rippled so intensely we were thrown to the ground. Great cracks opened and closed. Comox Lake receded then rushed back destroying logging wharves and buildings. A man raced uphill in terror and clung to a tree as his rowboat rushed past him on a wave. These are but a few incidents of the early Sunday morning quake. Brick walls and chimneys tumbled down.

The quake was felt in Vancouver and scientists have suggested another quake is overdue. The current Mount St. Helens eruption proves how precarious the earth is and how capricious nature can be.

Economic concern

I'm only 11, but I too get concerned about the economic situation. I recently heard Pierre Trudeau wanted $5,000 to redecorate his residence and Joe Clark wanted $30,000. That money is the taxpayers' and even though I know there are people who think that is tradition, there are many people, especially senior citizens, living below the poverty level.

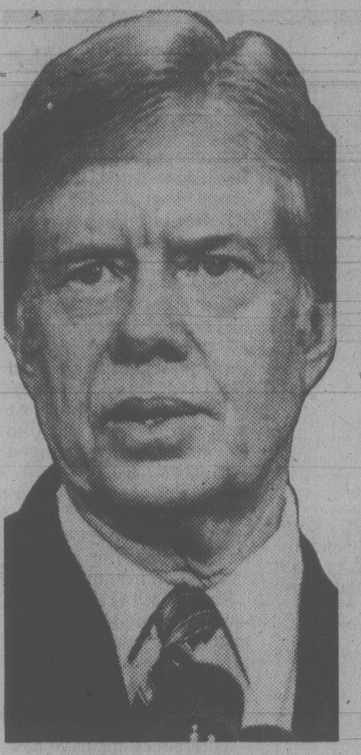
Use gasohol

Traffic across the Strait by bridge or tunnel will use far more fuel than the equivalent movement by ferry.

As for the use of natural gas in cars, it would be much simpler and cheaper to use gasohol — the alcohol (methanol) to be made from Hat Creek coal and/or prairie lignite.

It should be remembered that the Hat Creek deposit belongs to the province and not to the oil companies. — Harland W. Clark, 10994 Madrona Drive, Sidney.



CARTER . . . smears foes

By WILLIAM SAFIRE
New York Times

When Ronald Reagan suggested last week that Carter's inaction and vascillation had contributed to the U.S. predicament in Iran, the president was stung to fury. He indicated to editors that his political opponent was in unwitting league with the Communists and was helping the Soviet Union:

"I think the people in the Kremlin would agree completely with what Mr. Reagan has said," President Carter charged, adding with that dulcet viciousness that has become his campaign trademark that such criticism of the president "could only damage our own nation's prestige and help the Soviets."

One can imagine the editorial outrage that would have thundered if Reagan or Senator Kennedy had flailed out in such a manner, hinting that Carter was the dupe of Communists, acting in tandem with the Kremlin to damage the United States and help the Soviet Union.

Much of the media would have blanched at that kind of mudslinging: the "fellow traveller" smear is a relic of the Thirties and early Fifties. But Jimmy Carter was given a free pass — only Newsweek noted his remarks as a "low blow."

This episode was evidence to some of us that Carter has become afflicted with the same notion that obsessed Lyndon Johnson: that criticism of his policies was akin to being against the United States. At some point under pressure, some presidents begin to equate their administration with the nation itself, and look at political dissenters as unpatriotic or even in league with the nation's enemies.

Another similarity of the 1980 Carter approach to the 1964 Johnson campaign can be seen. Then, as now, the opposition was portrayed as trigger-happy, and the president was portrayed as standing firm against hawkish escalation. Then, as now, the moves toward relying on a military solution were made in tiny increments, in gradual response to provocation — never strong enough to be decisive but steadily drawing us into a quagmire.

Carter is no stranger to incrementalism. In trying to cope with inflation in his gingerly way, his appointees slowly raised interest rates over period of years. As a result, instead of a sharp and decisive rise that would have overwhelmed inflation, Carter's lagging, upward creep of interest rates actually contributed to the rise in the cost of living. Thus, like King Mithridates, who learned to take poison in small doses, inflation will die old.

In Iran, the same incrementalism is drawing us toward ineffectual involvement. Steps that if taken in rapid sequence would seize the initiative are, instead, taken over a year's time, encouraging resistance along the way.

First we break relations; then we wait. Second, we pressure a few allies to join our embargo; then we wait. Third, with opinion polls leading the way, Carter asks the Congress to declare a state of war unless the hostages are released by a date certain; then we wait. Fourth, we mine the harbors of Iran; then we wait. Fifth, we direct the unhappy sailors of the U.S.S. Nimitz to take out the island of Kharq and the refinery at Abadan; and wait some more.

Each ineffectual escalation is advertised as a "tightening of the screw," when in reality it is vice versa. The slow tighteners are leading the way into this year's quagmire. We give the Iranians time to adjust and to glory in their sufferings. We also present both the Soviet Union and the Iraqi government with a delectable opportunity to invade Iran under the pretext of protecting it from U.S. imperialism.

JOHNSON . . . same game

The long pauses between escalations are the most dangerous of times. As Carter waits for public opinion in the United States to push him further, the Soviets are able to position their forces on the Iranian border and to step up fifth column activity by their PLO allies inside Iran.

We are now in the pause between the breaking of relations and next month's joint embargo. We are slowly getting ready for our "surprise" mining of harbors in June. The Soviets are given time to prepare a real surprise to counter our non-surprise.

In political terms, the scenario is intended to be similar to 1964: a patient and restrained president denounces his political opposition for war-mongering as he slowly but surely escalates, always too little and too late. His poll ratings turn upward as he resolutely — but never decisively — winces in pain as he directs our inadequate armed forces, out of position and running low on beer, to engage the nation's enemies.

STRAY FEATHERS

Harold Hosford

That burst of summer we enjoyed last weekend, and the warm rain that followed on Monday morning, may have made the countryside more beautiful, but it sure did nothing for the view.

If that sounds more of a paradox than you can sort out, stay with me; there shall be light.

Every year about this time, birdwatchers on this coast begin to look for signs of the first waves of warblers moving through on their way north. This chapter of the annual spring migration is looked for with high anticipation, because there are few more colorful chapters in our birding year.

If conditions are right, in the next two or three weeks the binocular clan will be busy scanning every budding tree or shrub for a sight of one of that colorful little tribe, the wood warblers.

Because wood warblers are so small and so active as they flit through the branches in search of insects, insect larvae, and insect eggs, they're not the easiest birds in the world to see. And if you add to this activity a liberal dose of fresh, green spring foliage, the problem of spotting warblers becomes an exercise in patience, to say the least.

Which brings me back to last weekend.

While anybody who gave thought to it was enjoying the way that burst of warm weather was helping with the greening of southern Vancouver Island, some birdwatchers were a little uneasy. If the warm weather had kept up, and the rain had been no more than a shower or two, by this weekend the leaves on the deciduous trees would have been full out, and it would have taken a sharp eye to have picked up warblers — many of which are yellowish-green themselves — in that flood of spring leaves.

As it is, the leaves will still be far enough on to make watching warblers tough.

Nothing of what I've said should be taken to mean that the first warblers have just begun to arrive. Far from it. Some, like the Yellow-rumped Warbler, have been moving through for a month. Others, such as the Orange-crowned Warbler, suddenly made their presence known last weekend when their gentle, sibilant songs could be heard in almost any patch of deciduous shrubbery near Victoria. I've even heard that the golden-face Townsend's Warblers and black-faced Yellowthroats are in. But these are the vanguard. The great wave of warblers is still to come.

In looking over the list of warblers we're likely to see in the next few weeks, Victoria doesn't fare too well when compared with the rest of Canada. Here, with hard work, and a lot of good luck, one might turn up 10 species. In the Interior that might rise to a couple of dozen kinds, whereas in eastern Canada the total could be double that again.

We're also a little short-changed when it comes to the more colorful members of the tribe. While here yellow, in the form of Yellow Warblers and Wilson's Warblers, predominates, farther east crimson, as in the Redstarts, and fiery orange, as in Blackburnian Warblers, begins to take over. As a matter of fact, there are few families of birds on this continent that can outdo the wood warblers when it comes to color.

While it is maddening to try to find these tiny birds high in the dense foliage of one of our big coniferous trees, the birds help us a little in spring by keeping more to the deciduous trees. Here, among the flowers of broadleaf maple, and the leaves of catkins of alder, they are not only easier to find but to see as well.

So, if I go warbler watching in the next couple of weeks, I'm going to choose my spot carefully. It'll have to be a piece of sloping ground where I can get myself to the level of the tips of the deciduous trees and on an eye-to-eye basis with the warblers themselves, and from there I can either watch the warblers pass or the leaves grow. Which depends a lot on the weather.

CUBA

Tourism backfires

By WILLIAM CHISLETT

Cuba's burgeoning tourist industry has a lot to do with the restiveness that led to the invasion of the Peruvian Embassy by 10,000 fugitives from Fidel Castro's years of austerity.

The growing stream of visitors from the West has opened Cubans' eyes to the way the capitalist world lives.

True, the revolution has brought Cubans free education and medicine, but it has also brought rationing of food, clothing and gasoline. There is very little foreign travel, and even that is limited to the few who negotiate a careful vetting process.

The sight of Western tourists being shepherded around in air-conditioned buses is hard to bear for a people who often have to line up for an hour or more for public transport.

Cubans are limited to buying one pair of trousers and two pairs of shoes a year, a pound of meat or fish every 10 days, and 10 gallons of gas a month.

Castro is stimulating the tourist industry because the country's sugar exports — which account for all but a fraction of foreign earnings — are not enough to cover imports, even though Russia pays well over the world price for the sugar and also supplies Cuba with oil at well below the international price.

With his customary sense of humor, the Cuban leader said at a news conference last year that if Cuba really did export revolution then it would solve its balance of payments problems.

As it didn't, he claimed, it had to resort to other measures like tourism. By the end of this year 4,000 new hotel rooms will have been built since 1970.

I spent a week in Cuba on a package tour from Mexico which cost only $524 per person, including the two-and-a-half-hour flight, hotel, three meals, and excursions.

We were hospitably received and there was never a dirty look at us from the local population, but one felt an undercurrent of resentment.

Tour guides strongly warn tourists against exchanging money on the black market. Each visitor has a canje (exchange form) on which every purchase, even taxi rides, has to be noted.

"If you leave the country with more money than is on the form then we know that something irregular has happened," my guide smiled.

The canje entitles you to purchase drinks at vastly less than the Cubans pay, and the creation of two economies brings into sharp relief the different treatment accorded to Cubans and tourists.

For example, visitors can buy a bottle of rum for $3.50 (it has to be dollars), whereas Cubans have to pay almost $20.

The La Tropicana nightclub, the watering hole of the rich under the Batista dictatorship, is still going strong, but its bright lights contrast starkly with the energy conservation measures in force in the rest of the capital.

When you fly into Havana at night it is as if you were touching down in some poorly lit small town, not a city with two million inhabitants.

London Observer

Katharine Whitehorn

LONDON — Every time the Royal Family gets its pay from the state raised, or Mark Phillips kicks another horse, or Princess Margaret looks as if she might do something mildly indiscreet, there is one person who is absolutely bound to make a fuss: Willie Hamilton, Member of Parliament for the Scottish constituency of Fife Central.

He rises in the House of Commons to say the royals are a waste of money. He denounces their houses, their stables, their clothes, as an insult to the workers. He got himself rebuked by the Speaker for saying this month that as taxpayers we ought not to be asked to foot the bill for the kind of "indefensible behavior" indulged in by "this wayward lady" — Princess Margaret.

He is now part of what is quaintly known in Britain as Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition, but even when his party was in power he loyally opposed Her Majesty, Her Majesty's family and every penny the nation spends on her.

So much so that I am beginning to wonder whether Mr. Hamilton might not actually be on the Palace pay-roll. For consider what happens every time he opens his mouth.

First someone else instantly gets up and tries to get him to shut it. Second, someone else implies that he is a disloyal, rude, ugly, unlikeable pig. Thousands of people who don't care about royalty one way or another are faintly repelled by his attacks, and thousands more feel that royalty shouldn't be attacked anyway, since they can't answer back.

They can, of course; and they always could. They have a press office — several press offices; they have tongues in their heads, as the saying goes; and if the Queen or Princess Margaret or even Mark Phillips were suddenly guided to say that Willie Hamilton was a pompous bore there wouldn't be a newspaper or TV network in the country that wouldn't leap to give it coverage. The fact that they don't answer back merely proves that they have found it wiser not to; which is a very different thing.

They are not, after all, above criticism. Discreet as they are, the royals do occasionally do things which are not especially lovable. Prince Philip has nowhere near the politeness of his Queen; he is quite capable of rolling his eyes to heaven when dancing with a Commonwealth lady he doesn't care for, or of making a boorish crack about someone's national dress: my husband reported a royal tour of India and has never forgotten the excruciatingly embarrassing occasion when Prince Philip said, "Not very tall, are you, haw haw," to some tiny dignitary.

Princess Margaret, never mind the discretion, has been waspish with the press over the years when she didn't happen to be in the mood to smile. Princess Anne doesn't seem to be able to keep within the speed limit, and some of the lesser royals and their mates have had question marks hanging over them from time to time. Angus Ogilvy, for example, Princess Alexandra's husband, nobly and speedily resigned from a firm that was under investigation and there was nothing like the scandal that attached to Prince Bernhard in the Netherlands.

Nevertheless the days are over when royalty bore a charmed life, never working for its living, never getting its hands dirty. Imagine a Tudor royal actually mucking out his own stables, as Princess Anne and Mark Phillips do!

So any time a criticism comes up, what happens? It gets personified in the stalwart figure of this indefatigable politician. He gains credit for his anti-royalist views; the monarchy gain sympathy from people who don't like to see them attacked; the royals, I suspect, must rejoice because it's just that ass Willie as usual. And the fuss, whatever it was, goes away. Is not this the old function of the Royal Fool, who was allowed to say rude things about the King that no one else could say, who acted as clown, jester and general safety valve for criticism?

Maybe he's not really in the pay of the Palace. But maybe he's not so violently anti-tradition as everyone thinks. For once, long ago, he was caught between trains on a desolate station platform in the Midlands with a friend of mine — and his.

People confide in each other in such circumstances; as the wind blew and the night grew darker, my friend asked, "Where would you really like to end up Willie? Would you like to be prime minister?"

"I don't think that's very likely," he said. And then he added wistfully, "But actually I would rather like to end up in the House of Lords."

today's markets

Toronto

The Toronto stock market was up moderately in moderately active mid-afternoon trading today.

Trading in shares of Keeprite Inc., which was halted Thursday, resumed at the opening and by 2 p.m. the stock was down ⅞ to 13⅞.

Keeprite said the Ontario Securities Commission did not approve the company's proposal to repurchase up to 600,000 of its outstanding common shares at $17 a share.

Trading in shares of Husky Oil Ltd., which was halted during the morning, resumed at 2 p.m. up 1½ to $82½.

The U.S. government said a natural gas field discovered by Husky last week in the National Petroleum Reserve in Alaska is in a geologic structure larger in size than the Prudhoe Bay oilfield.

But Husky said it has no interest in the well. It is acting in a joint venture as contract operator in an oil and gas exploration program for the U.S. government, it said.

The exchange also said the Ontario Securities Commission issued a cease-trading order Friday in shares of New Kelore Mines Ltd. because the company was not up-to-date on required filings. The stock was halted on the exchange Thursday and last traded at 43 cents.

Among industrials, Falconbridge Nickel A jumped 4¼ to $100¼, Gulf Canada 2 to $140½, Husky Oil 2 to $82.

Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prices were mixed today in heavy trading on the Vancouver Stock Exchange. Volume to 7:45 a.m. PST (later report unavailable due to transmission problems) was 492,576 shares.

Of the issues traded, 54 advanced, 46 declined and 77 were unchanged.

B.C. Resources Investment Corp. led the industrials, down .07 at $6⅜ on 13,710 shares. Potter Distillers A gained .03 at $1.30 on 400.

On the resource and development board, Taurus Resources lost .10 at $3.5 on 125,700 shares. Charriot Resources Rights was unchanged at ¼ on 31,753, Pacific Resources was unchanged at .42 on 12,500 and Tintina Silver Mines gained .20 at $4 on 12,200

Univex Mining Corp. led the curb exchange, down .02 at .35 on 10,000 shares. Gallant Gold Mines gained .05 at $1.80 on 8,700, Cherokee Development Ltd. lost .02 at .87 on 7,500 and Uke Resources was unchanged at $1.08 on 7,400.

New York

The stock market was mixed today after an early rally failed to stand up.

Several large banks lowered their prime rates to 19½ per cent, two days after Chase Manhattan of New York cut its basic charge on blue-chip loans to 19¾.

The reductions gave new impetus to hopes that interest rates might have reached a turning point after their long climb over the past three years.

But analysts said traders still seemed edgy over the prospective impact of the business slowdown that is expected to accompany any substantial drop in rates.

Auto stocks remained under pressure. Ford Motor dropped 1¾ to $23⅜ and General Motors 2 to $40½, both in active trading.

Sony led the active list, up ¼ at $7⅞.

London

The London stock market was mixed near the close of moderate trading today.

The Financial Times index was down two points to 440.6.

Golds firmed while banks and industrials eased.

Canadian stocks were mixed.

THE ORDER IS OUT:

REDUCE STOCK NOW!

The order is out!!! Jerry Rosen, A & B Sound's Comptroller, is generally a nice, normal guy — except at YEAR END. At Year End, he growls and prowls the hall, grumbling about high inventory levels, too many demos and how much there is to count. With all the models we carry and the stacks of back-up inventories, Jerry has a lot to count and he's not happy. That's why we're holding our gigantic Pre-inventory Sale with prices so low that we're practically giving the stuff away! I mean, we want the stock reduced drastically!! So head to A & B Sound today and check out the bargains. You'll love Jerry's prices.

'Wait and hope' on interest rate: Curtis

Thursday's small decrease in Canadian bank interest rates got only a very guarded word of approval from B.C. Finance Minister Hugh Curtis.

He wants stronger indications of a trend before admitting to anything more than cautious optimism.

"The reason I'm hesitating is I'm hoping this isn't a lull before another upward push," Curtis said.

Three of Canada's major chartered banks have lowered their prime lending rates by one-quarter of one per cent.

The Bank of B.C. has followed the trend and is reducing its prime rate to 17 1/4 per cent from 17½ per cent, effective April 21.

Prime rate for small and intermediate-sized businesses requiring operating credit up to $250,000 will be maintained at half of one per cent below the bank's current prime rate.

The move follows a decline in the Bank of Canada lending rate to 15.96 per cent from 16.2 per cent — the first time that rate has dropped since the central bank moved to a floating rate system March 10.

Some economists see it as the start of a downward slide of interest rates to more normal levels.

But Curtis says: "For every economist who forecasts that, you'll find another who will forecast precisely the opposite.

"It's just a question of wait and hope."

The minister says it has now become clear the U.S. has entered a recession and that is having an effect on certain areas of the B.C. economy.

Hardest hit are construction and forestry.

In the western U.S., the worsening recession in the housing industry caused layoffs and reductions in work weeks at lumber mills in 12 states to nearly double in one week, the Western Wood Products Association said on Thursday.

The Portland-based trade association said a survey of more than half of its 330 member mills showed 44,000 employees were either laid off or working short weeks in the week ending last Sunday.

That compared with 27,000 layoffs the previous week.

The 820 mills in the west normally employ 137,000 persons.

"I think the administration in the U.S., at some point quite soon, will have to address itself to matters other than Iran," Curtis said.

"If there can be initiatives taken in terms of housing starts in the United States, that will have a beneficial effect here."

The finance minister added, with a touch of gloom: "I didn't come into this portfolio saying I have all the magic answers and I don't feel that way today."

One thing brightening Curtis' outlook is the fact that B.C. is in the position of not having to borrow money at this time of high interest rates.

"We are very fortunate there is no need for us to go to the money market, domestic or international, at this time," he said.

Pressure tactics by Cargill accomplish nothing: Hewitt

Cargill Grain — the U.S.-based firm stymied in its bid to purchase financially-troubled Maplewood Poultry of Abbotsford — will not win public support by pressuring the provincial government, Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt said Thursday.

The B.C. government has consistently opposed Cargill's application, saying it would give the company control of 80 per cent of turkey production and 45 per cent of broiler production in B.C.

The application was rejected Wednesday in Ottawa by the Foreign Investment Review Agency for not being of significant benefit to Canada.

Federal rejection came shortly after the company had taken out newspaper advertisements accusing the provincial government of being more concerned with its political image than with major problems facing the poultry processing industry.

Hewitt said Thursday the government's concern about Cargill's power has been further supported by its decision to phase out turkey production at its Panco Poultry plant in Surrey.

"If Panco moves out of the turkey processing altogether I'm not too enthused about them as a corporate citizen," Hewitt said.

Cargill's decision to close the plant is just a pressure step, the minister said.

"I think it's unfortunate and I think they're wrong in their decision if they feel that that type of pressure is what's going to win them a good public relations with the people of B.C."

Hewitt said his major concern now is to try to find a solution to keep Maplewood, which is scheduled to close today, from closing.

The minister was to meet with Maplewood president J.J. Hambley and his bankers to explore alternatives to keep the plant open.

"But I must advise that one of those alternatives is not the government purchasing the Maplewood plant," he said.

"The government cannot step in and salvage every plant, whether it be in agriculture or any other sector of the economy. That is not what the private sector is all about."

BCFP common to split 2 for 1

VANCOUVER (CP) — Common shares in B.C. Forest Products Co. Ltd. will be split two for one, shareholders decided at the company's annual meeting Thursday.

Trading of the new shares is expected to begin on the Montreal, Toronto and Vancouver stock exchanges May 2.

Shareholders also approved a new employee share-purchase plan and authorized the company to contribute to financing.

The split means the company's authorized common-share volume doubles to 40 million but does not alter the position of preferred shares, a company spokesman said.

He said the split is being made to increase the number of common shares available to the general public and improve their marketability.

The shareholders also elected Gordon MacFarlane, chairman of B.C. Telephone Co., to the BCFP board of directors.

The company reported first quarter earnings for 1980 of $14.8 million on sales of $184.8 million, down from the $22.9 million earned on sales of $178.3 million during the same period in 1979.

It's a multi-national fling

Multi-national is the way to describe what has been happening in the Greater Victoria Music Festival this week.

The first three days of the festival have been dominated by dance; school groups, ethnic groups and Highland dancers. The pipes tuned up and the kilts started to swirl today at St. Matthias Church Hall. There will be more of the same there tonight starting at 7 and continuing through Saturday morning and afternoon.

School dance took two days to complete, ending this afternoon. Folk dances of many countries were the choice in the case of a number of schools, but there was also jazz, modern, disco, social dance, creative, rhythmics and even cheerleading. The latter from St.Andrew's School junior secondary level.

But the multi-national aspect gets its truest and widest representation in what is happening this afternoon and evening at Lansdowne Junior Secondary.

Clubs and individuals will be performing to heel-stamping, hand-clapping music in a spring blaze of color, offering authentic dances from such countries as Mexico, Spain, Switzerland, Germanic lands, Italy, Poland, Portugal, the Ukraine, Quebec and England.

The session tonight begins at 7 at Lansdowne. Comments on the performances will be made by adjudicator Carol Coulson of Vancouver. Mrs. Coulson will make a selection from among the most outstanding performances to provide a balanced and varied Honor Performance to take place Saturday at Lansdowne, commencing at 7 p.m.

The Festival continues through the next two weeks with vocal, instrumental and speech sessions at various centres. Official programs giving full details can be obtained at music stores or at the halls where sessions are taking place.

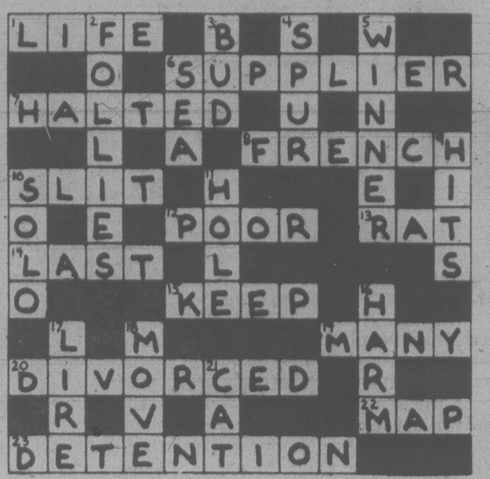
—PAYOFF PUZZLE—

Correct Answers to Last Week's Puzzle



CLUES ACROSS:

1. LIFE not wife. Since one is primarily aware of the handicaps of the invalid himself, rather than his wife, LIFE is the stronger answer.

7. HALTED not halved. The clue's "invasion" theme links up more particularly with HALTED.

8. FRENCH not wrench. To "have a really good grasp" implies a comprehension or command, as of FRENCH. The user of a wrench would have it "firmly in his grasp."

10. SLIT not slip. Specifying "accidental" has more point for SLIT. A slip is an accident anyway.

12. POOR not pool. "POOR" is well in accord with the theme of players having occasion to make excuses. Pool is no more apt than any other game.

14. LAST not list. Whether listing or not, she may "LAST for quite a long time."

15. KEEP not keen. Being keen on the game simply as such, they may be found to KEEP on playing till very late. They have no special keeness to play late, any more than early.

19. MANY not Manx. MANY cats have "some" (one or another, unspecific) physical peculiarity. Manx cats have a particular physical peculiarity, their lack of tails.

20. DIVORCED not divorces. The clue has the air of being about people, in which respect the DIVORCED are more directly apt.

22. MAP not man. "Many years ago" may well mean a time beyond the experience of even an old man. Also, the clue's concern with "a place" tends to favor MAP.

23. DETENTION not detection. From the fugitive's point of view, it is actual DETENTION that means the end of his freedom and so is the very last thing he wants.

CLUES DOWN:

2. FOLLIES not fillies. The turn of phrase: "not without its -------" means that it does have its fillies/FOLLIES, i.e., such things do crop up, or have to be admitted to occur. This does not suit fillies, which are an important part of the essential basis of horse-racing.

3. BUD not mud. It may "seem a pity" that a BUD should not have been allowed to mature. The bringing in of mud is more actively objectionable than the clue's phrasing suggests.

6. SEA not set. The clue lays no ground for referring casually or vaguely to "the set"; it would be better to say "on a film SET," for instance. "The SEA" is both self-explanatory and very apt as regards the sense of the clue.

10. SOLO not sole. "Sit and enjoy" implies a certain passiveness, as when listening to a SOLO. A nice sole is something to eat and enjoy.

11. HOLE not mole or vole. Since, in any case, no mole or vole is big enough to be of consequence, the clue's specifying a "little" one has more point for HOLE.

16. HARM not warm. It can HARM you if you lie long in the sun — perhaps longer than would be wise. The warming effect is more or less immediate.

Heroin Act still in limbo

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. Court of Appeal reserved judgment Thursday in an intergovernmental dispute involving the constitutional validity of the provincial Heroin Treatment Act.

The court's decision, unless the matter goes to the Supreme Court of Canada, will determine whether B.C.'s heroin addicts can be forcibly treated for their drug dependency.

During the four-day hearing, lawyer Boyd Ferris, for the province, argued that the act, as health legislation, is within the power of the provincial legislature to enact.

Lawyer Ron Stern, representing a former addict, contended that the act invades the federal government's exclusive jurisdiction in criminal law and is beyond Victoria's legislative powers.

The appeal concerns a decision in which Chief Justice Allan McEachern of the B.C. Supreme Court held that the Heroin Treatment Act is invalid because it invades federal jurisdiction.

The act, which requires addicts to undergo a three-year treatment program, including a six-month period of detention, is in limbo pending the outcome of the appeal.

Pool death inquest jury urges new standards

A coroner's jury has recommended municipal, provincial or federal authorities set new safety standards for indoor pools.

The jury, inquiring into the death of three-year-old Timothy Lawrence Christianson who drowned in a pool at the Orangewood Manor at 4026 Quadra March 30, noted a lack of regulations dealing with pools in multiple-family dwellings.

The jury said there is a need for legislative action to remove the oversight.

The child wandered into the unlocked pool enclosure and was found floating in the water by his mother a short time later.

The jury urged the apartment owners to implement a recommendation by Saanich deputy fire chief Orval McGregor.

McGregor suggested locks be placed on exterior glass doors leading to the pool and an emergency exit be installed to replace an existing sliding glass door.

In other matters, coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre has ordered an inquest into the death of five-year-old Isabelle Yellowknee who died last Friday six days after eating a poisonous weed growing behind her house at 21 Hayward Heights.

The inquest will begin Monday in the small claims courtroom of the Law Courts, 850 Burdett.

The same night an inquest will begin into the death of Charles Gallagher, 31, of 1260 Fort who died March 23 from injuries he received in a single-car crash at Cedar Hill near Jennifer.

On the following night, Tuesday, a coroner's jury will hear further evidence concerning the death of Kathleen Ann Cameron, 17, of 2224 Edgelow. She died Jan. 2 when a jeep in which she was a passenger crashed into a hydro pole at McKenzie near Oakwinds.

St. Jorre also set May 21 to continue an inquest into the death of Robina Robertson Kenworthy who died in a fire in her apartment at 200 Dallas April 7.

UVic alumni meet April 29

Shrinking mineral and energy reserves will be discussed by a senior Canadian civil servant at the University of Victoria Alumni Association's 1980 general meeting April 29.

The speaker will be Jean Paul Drolet, senior assistant deputy minister of energy, mines and resources at Ottawa.

The meeting, open to the public, will be at 7 p.m. in the faculty club.

Stunned Hab fans couldn't believe it

By The Canadian Press

The shock and disbelief was plain to see.

The Canadiens might lose the odd game in their own Montreal Forum — nobody's perfect.

But to lose two consecutive playoff games at home! That hasn't happened since the Canadiens dropped the first two games of the 1966 Stanley Cup final against Detroit Red Wings and then won the next four to take the National Hockey League championship.

More than 16,000 fans saw it happen again. Minnesota North Stars outskated the Canadiens on Thursday night for a 4-1 victory and a 2-0 lead in their best-of-seven quarter-final series.

"Look, we came here wanting to win at least one," said Minnesota coach Glen Sonmor. "To take both is just incredible. I'd be a liar if I said I wasn't the most surprised guy around."

The last time Montreal lost a quarter-final series was in 1974 to New York Rangers and Philadelphia Flyers went on to win their first Stanley Cup.

The Canadiens now face a difficult task of trying to win at least once in Bloomington, Minn., as the North Stars are hosts for the third and fourth games Saturday and Sunday. Minnesota lost just eight of 40 games at home during the regular season.

Already hurting with defencemen Serge Savard and Guy Lapointe, and centres Pierre Mondou and Doug Risebrough injured, Montreal again may be without star right winger Guy Lafleur.

Lafleur missed Thursday's game with a knee injury and was not scheduled to make the weekend trip.

"I really think Montreal is missing Lafleur," said Minnesota goalie Gilles Meloche. "Who wouldn't? He's the best player in the NHL."

In other playoff action, New York Islanders edged Boston Bruins 5-4 in overtime, Philadelphia beat New York Rangers 4-1 and Buffalo Sabres beat Chicago Black Hawks 6-4.

The Islanders, Philadelphia and Buffalo also lead their respective series 2-0. The next two games also are Saturday and Sunday with the Islanders, the Rangers and the Black Hawks acting as hosts.

"We knew Montreal would come out skating like hell, but we were lucky and got the breaks all night," said Meloche who faced 41 shots — 32 over the first two periods.

Meloche made some outstanding saves to preserve the North Stars' triumph.

"Our mistakes have cost us, but Meloche is hot," said Montreal goalie Denis Herron, who faced 32 shots.

New York took its second overtime victory from Boston in as many nights but not before the two teams set a playoff record for penalty minutes by the end of the first period.

After several fights during the opening period, the two teams squared off in a brawl at the end of the period. Four players from each team were ejected and the two teams found themselves each assessed 124 minutes in penalties — a playoff record, as was the total of 248.

"Teams have tried to cut us down for years and the press has been on us and finally we stood up," said Bob Bourne of the Islanders.

Bob Nystrom of the Islanders forced the game into overtime when he tied the score at 11:06 of the third period, just 15 seconds after Bob Miller gave the Bruins a 4-3 lead.

Paul Holmgren and Bill Barber scored within a 14-second span in the second period to spark Philadelphia past New York.

Perreault's assists established a club playoff record.

The victory was the 101st playoff win for Buffalo coach Scotty Bowman, making him the winningest coach in NHL playoff history.

Skalbania buys Bruins' franchise

Times News Services

Vancouver businessman Nelson Skalbania, a former owner of two World Hockey Association teams, has purchased New Westminster Bruins of the Western Hockey League for an undisclosed sum.

Ernie McLean, Bruins' coach and co-owner, made the announcement after the sale was approved by the league on Wednesday.

Skalbania, 42, bought and sold $600 million worth of real estate last year. He owned Indianapolis Racers of the now-defunct World Hockey Association, and also owned Edmonton Oilers when Edmonton was in the WHA. The Oilers, Winnipeg Jets, Hartford Whalers and Quebec Nordiques, joined the National League this season after the WHA disbanded.

His best-known hockey deal was the signing of Wayne Gretzky, then 17 years old, to a seven-year, $1.75 million personal services contract.

He subsequently passed Gretzky and two other players to current Oilers owner Peter Pocklington for $850,000.

McLean said he now is considering a lucrative offer to coach in Japan as well as a full-time scouting job with Detroit Red Wings of the NHL.

There were reports that the last-place Bruins franchise changed hands for about $300,000. McLean said the price was higher than that, but he would not give any figures.

Skalbania said he will keep the team in New Westminster, adding that it is conceivable McLean will remain as coach.

McLean and team general manager Bill Shinske, who each owned half of the Bruins, moved the team to New Westminster from Estevan, Sask. in 1971.

The Bruins won four consecutive WHL titles and two Memorial Cups in the late 1970s amid criticism of the aggressive style McLean encouraged.

On the ice, Steve Tsujiura's goal at 3:21 in overtime gave Medicine Hat Tigers a 7-6 win over Regina Pats in the third game of the WHL's Eastern Division final Thursday before 2,870 fans in Medicine Hat.

Regina leads the best-of-seven series 2-1. The fourth game will be played in Medicine Hat tonight.

The Tigers led 4-3 going into the third period but three Regina goals within a span of 2:50 gave the Pats a 6-4 lead. But Kevin Ginnell scored at 16:14 to bring the Tigers within one and Brad Kempthorne's second goal of the night, with 39 seconds left, tied the game.

Mike Lay scored two goals for Medicine Hat to go along with Kempthorne's pair and Peter Steblyk added a single in the second period.

The Tigers, outshot 45-29, took 10 of 15 minor penalties, two of four majors and one of two 10-minute misconducts.

Teams went into the game after paying at total of $2,000 in fines as the result of a bench-clearing brawl in Regina in the series' second game.

As well, Bruce Gordon of Tigers was suspended for five games for being the first identifiable player off the bench and Gord Gejdos, also of Tigers, was handed a one-game suspension for leaving the penalty box to join the fray.

Medicine Hat was fined $1,000 for lacking control of its team when several members entered the stands and an additional $500 for having the first player off the bench. Regina was fined $500 for having insufficient police protection at the game.

Cougars have arrived but not their potential

When it comes to opinions, they can be as varied as the number of noses in the room. But in respect to Victoria Cougars, one series away from representing the Western Hockey League in the 1980 Memorial Cup showdown, there is consensus in this regard:

Champions of the Western Division, the Cougars, as a team, have not fully reached their potential as a major junior hockey power. Nineteen is the age of graduation but the Cougars are, in respect to potential, an 18-year-old team.

"If everybody comes back," manager-coach Jack Shupe said Friday, "I could almost pick next year's team without holding a training camp.

"With four defencemen returning; (Barry) Pederson, (Mark) Morrison and (John) Newberry at centre; (Torrie) Robertson and (Brad) Palmer starting on the left side and (Grant) Fuhr back in goal, we wouldn't even have to bother about an overage player."

That's next season. This one is not over, however. And while they await the outcome of the Eastern Division final, even some of the players are aware that there is room to improve on potential, without having to wait for next year.

Consider the remarks of winger Bob Jansch, one day after the Cougars swept aside Seattle Breakers in four straight in the West Division final:

"We really did not play as well as we have in some games," said Jansch. "We fell to our typical Seattle form and the amazing thing is that, as badly as we played at times, we still knocked them out in four straight."

This is not to take anything from Victoria's first divisional championship. Rather, it might help explain the ebb and flow of performance over the season. At their best, the Cougars could bowl over any rival. At other times, however, the lack of a year's maturity has been evident as their play has dipped to mediocrity or even omigosh.

As a result, the swings — combined with their superb skating and honest toughness — have made the Cougars an exciting team to watch.

"In the matter of skating and results achieved, I would rank this Cougar team almost in the same breath as a great Edmonton Oil King team that included the likes of Norm Ullman, John Bucyk, Jerry Melnyk, Billy McNeill. Never having been forced to play defensively in the West, they lost the 1954 Memorial Cup final to a St. Catharines TeePee team that was obviously inferior but was able to take advantage of Edmonton's defensive weaknesses.

In one respect, Cougars could be stronger than that 1954 Oil King squad. That is in depth. Victoria has the West's two best netminders in Kevin Eastman and Fuhr, a defense that neglects its full potential but can be very good, and three strong lines.

The depth thrills Shupe, especially since Newberry, Paul Cyr and defencemen Jerry Heikkala moved up from tier two ranks to swell the roster to 22. En route to a berth in the 1973 Memorial Cup final, the Shupe-coached Medicine Hat Tigers "went most of the season with only 16 players, then picked up three from Drumheller" after the Miners were finished with their tier two playoffs.

"Until this year, the 1973 Tigers were the best team I ever coached. But when it comes to depth, migawd, there's no comparison."

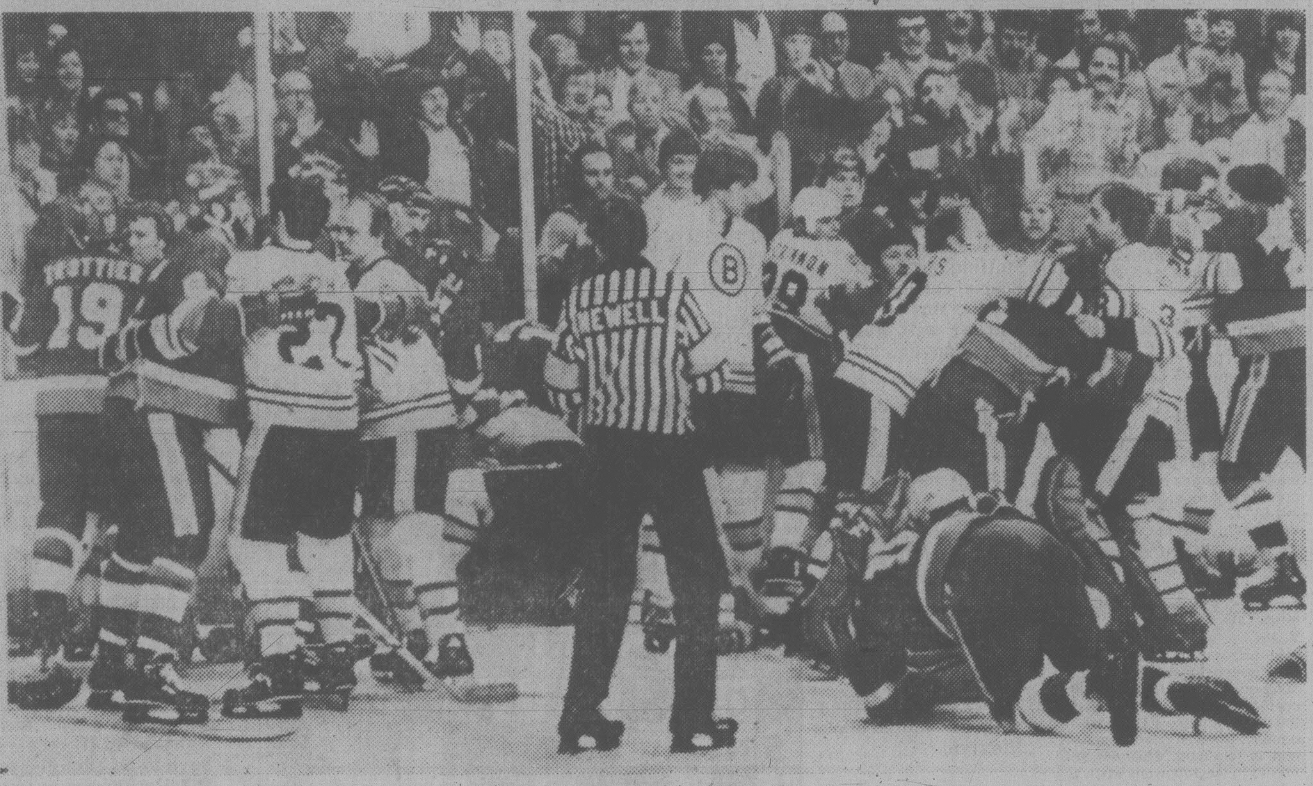
Giving that depth to the "18-year-old team" were Eastman, defenceman Mark Robinson and wingers Greg Adams, Jansch, Bob Smith (this year's overage player) and Randy Zinn. They are the only players due to move on. Eastman, clearly, is the comeback kid. He rebounded from a so-so campaign last season to finish as the netminding champ this year. Robinson, Adams, Jansch and Smith provided much of the steadying influence returning players are expected to provide.

Shupe fully expects Victoria's depth to have a telling effect over the Eastern Division winners, be they Regina or Medicine Hat.

He also figures his team "has a solid edge" in goaltending, despite a worrisome note passed along by Fuhr this week. His problems with a skin condition flared up at the start of the week.

A new medicine, after a visit to a skin specialist in Vancouver on Thursday, "is supposed to clear up the problem, hopefully within a week," said Shupe.



FACING THE PROBLEM, referee Dave Newell surveys free-for-all that erupted late in first period during Thursday's Bruins-New York Islanders' playoff game in Boston. Both benches cleared and brawl lasted 15 minutes before ice was cleared and National Hockey League game resumed. Islanders edged Bruins 5-4 in overtime to grab 2-0 series lead. (AP Wirephoto).

Cey's swings are a hit at last

By The Canadian Press

Just when Los Angeles Dodgers needed a hit man, Ron Cey began to gun down National League pitchers.

The stumbling Dodgers dropped five of their first six games as Cey got off to a dismal 2-for-23 start. But the stocky third baseman unloaded two singles and a double and drove in two runs in a 10-4 triumph over San Diego Padres on Wednesday night.

Cey ran his streak to seven straight hits Thursday with a two-run homer and a pair of singles, to lead Los Angeles to a 6-4 decision over Houston Astros in the Dodgers' baseball home opener.

"I've played long enough and I've been through these things before, so I wasn't worried," Cey said. "I wasn't swinging the bat for the most part like I was capable.

"We opened against the Astros and they got me out with good pitching. My timing was off, I was being over-anxious and not being as selective as I wanted. I wanted to get out of the rut."

It's a good thing he did because the Dodgers already are five games off the pace in the West Division after unbeaten Cincinnati Reds made it eight straight with a 4-1 victory over winless Atlanta Braves.

Cey, who homered in the third inning to cap a four-run burst against Nolan Ryan, delivered his game-winning single off rookie Dave Smith. He has hit safely in his last seven official at-bats — two short of his own club record — and has reached base in his last 11 appearances, four on walks.

Ryan, Houston's celebrated free agent, was hit hard again in his second start of the season, both against Los Angeles. He allowed eight hits in six innings.

Elsewhere, San Francisco Giants stopped San Diego Padres 7-3, St. Louis Cardinals outslugged Pittsburgh Pirates 12-9 and Chicago Cubs downed New York Mets 4-1. Montreal Expos and Philadelphia Phillies were not scheduled.

In the American League, Carlton Fisk belted a home run in the 11th inning to give Boston Red Sox a 5-4 victory over Detroit Tigers; Rick Bosetti hit a home run in the bottom of the ninth, only the fourth hit off Milwaukee pitcher Lary Sorensen, to give Toronto Blue Jays a 1-0 victory over Milwaukee Brewers; Eddie Murray and Al Bumbry socked home runs and reliever Tim Stoddard choked off a Kansas City rally in the eighth to give Baltimore Orioles a 5-2 victory over the Royals; rookie left-hander Britt Burns pitched five perfect innings enroute to his first major league win as Chicago White Sox beat New York Yankees 8-6, and pinch-runner Larry Milbourne scored from first base in the ninth on Bruce Bochte's double to give Seattle Mariners a 4-3 win over Minnesota Twins.

Flames deny offer accepted

Times News Services

A top official of Atlanta Flames denied a report Thursday that three Calgary businessmen have offered $14 million to buy the beleaguered National Hockey League club.

"That is absolutely not true," said Bob Kent, the chief executive officer of the Flames. A Toronto report said the Seaman brothers of Calgary offered Flames owner Tom Cousins that amount.

The brothers are major shareholders in Bow Valley Industries, an oil and gas company worth an estimated $170 million.

Cousins, an Atlanta developer, confirmed earlier in the week that he is looking for a buyer for the financially-troubled team, which has lost $2 million a year since its arrival in Atlanta seven years ago.

In an interview Wednesday, Byron (B. J.) Seaman said his brother Darryl R. (Doc) Seaman has been in Atlanta talking with Cousins for the last couple of days, "but it doesn't mean that an offer was made."

Byron said the $14-million report out of Toronto "is entirely erroneous."

"I wish people would quit speculating and leave people to do their business and wait to learn about it all after it's done. Some of the reports have been pure drivel."

Red Wings goalie Rogie Vachon, expressing dissatisfaction with his play in the last two seasons, says the team should consider trading him.

Vachon, 34, joined Detroit as a free agent two seasons ago, signing a five-year contract for $1.9 million after toiling with Montreal Canadiens and Los Angeles Kings.

But he's unhappy with the Wings. Detroit has not expressed any interest in trading Vachon, who played in 59 games this season and finished with a 3.61 goals-against average and four shutouts.

"Mooning" may be the coming rage in soccer, but it will be a costly habit.

Winger Willie Johnston of Vancouver Whitecaps has been suspended for two games by the North American League for a "mooning" incident. Johnston was suspended for 10 days and fined $750 by the league after lowering his pants in front of the Seattle bench at Vancouver last Saturday during a shootout against the Sounders.

Johnston will be suspended for Saturday's game at Empire Stadium against Minnesota Kicks and an April 26 game in Los Angeles against the Aztecs.

He also has been fined an unspecified amount by the Whitecaps.

And in Frankfurt, Austrian international Kurt Jara was fined $5,400 today for dropping his shorts in a gesture of disdain for the crowd in a West German league match in Munich last December.

Victoria-area waters yielding best returns

Salmon fishermen should stick around the southern end of Vancouver Island this weekend — that's where they'll find most of the action.

Some severe tide changes in the latter part of this week appeared to have slowed returns a little off Sooke but fair numbers of chinooks to 18 pounds were landed at the weekend between The Bluffs and Otter Point.

Best catches were reported on Tom Macks, Wonder Spoons and either green and white or green and blue Squirts and hootchies trolled close to the bottom.

Limit catches of chinooks to 25 pounds have been taken between Aldridge Point and Beechey Head with anchovies, white fluorescent hootchies or Squirts and strip trolled at depths between 60 and 110 feet.

E.R. Gibson nailed the heaviest chinook at Pedder Bay this week. He boated a 20-pounder Sunday while fishing with a minnow off Christopher Point. Other productive spots have been Whirl Bay and right inside Pedder itself. Anchovies are the preferred bait.

To spice the picture further, one lucky fisherman boated an 88 pound halibut during the week.

John Shipley had the good fortune Monday to land a 7½-pound coho while jigging a Pirkens near The Gap and a 35-pound halibut was weighed in Thursday at Oak Bay Marina.

Larger strip has been used to boat chinooks to 19 pounds along the inside of James Island while chinooks to 18 pounds are being caught on silver or green hootchies off Cordova Spit.

Action has picked up a little but is still "spotty" in Saanich Inlet with chinooks to 10 pounds showing at depths between 150 and 175 feet off Sluggett Point, Indian Bay and Coles Bay.

A few blues are also showing in the vicinity of Senanus Island.

Chinooks to 10 pounds have turned up in Finlayson Arm in scattered locations and a few blues are showing off the White Lady and Stone House. Unfortunately, an influx of sea lions appears to have slowed the action a little.

Chinook fishing has slowed down off Nanaimo but numerous blues are turning up around Five Fingers.

Northwest Bay and Claytons have produced chinooks to 10 pounds on bait and white fluorescent hootchies.

A few chinooks to seven pounds have turned up off Bamfield but other areas around the mouth of Alberni Inlet were described as "dead".

The odd chinook to 10 pounds and a few blues near Denman and Hornby islands brighten an otherwise bleak picture for Courtenay fishermen but fair numbers of chinooks to 14 pounds have been landed in scattered spots off Campbell River in bucktails, strip and silver hootchies.

Strip and red-colored lures have brought in blues to 2½ pounds near Deepwater Bay and Rock Bay.

Freshwater anglers have been landing trou — mostly on bait — in Somenos, Quamichan, Cowichan, First, Second, Divers, Boomerang, Sproat (near the Taylor River), Comox, Lower Campbell, Pye and Stella lakes.

NIBBLES: Victoria Fish and Game Protective Association will hold its monthly meeting Monday at 8 p.m. in Strawberry Vale Hall, 11 High Street.

Jim Chabot, the minister of lands, parks and housing, made his position on Sidney Island quite clear in a recent letter to Pamela Brown, secretary of the Sidney Island Committee.

"Based on the funding for park land acquisition, we have more pressing priorities throughout British Columbia than the acquisition of the remaining private lands on Sidney Island."

Maybe a few more letters from people in the southern end of Vancouver Island and the Lower Mainland — those who would benefit from a larger park — would help convince him.

Boycott may hit Winter bid

Times News Services

A Canadian boycott of the Olympic Games in Moscow this summer might hurt Calgary's chances of being named host of the 1988 Winter Games, the president of the Canadian Olympic Association says.

Richard Pound said Thursday if Canada turns out to be one of just a few countries complying with the United States' call for a boycott of the Moscow Games, the International Olympic Committee might penalize Canada's application to host the Winter Games eight years from now.

"When (the application) comes before the IOC, people are going to say, hey, aren't you the folks who let us down in 1980?" Pound said.

The association president said the federal government should not boycott the Games unless the action is part of a broader plan to punish the Soviet Union for its invasion of Afghanistan.

The government still has not made a decision on the boycott. Pound said he wants an answer by April 26, the date of the Olympic association's annual meeting. The deadline for entries to Olympic events is May 24.

In London, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher reiterated her appeal to British athletes to boycott the Olympic Games in Moscow and a major British television network announced a cut in its live coverage of the Games.

Mrs. Thatcher told the House of Commons that "the situation has changed since the British Olympic Association took its preliminary decision," to go to Moscow in defiance of her support for President Jimmy Carter's campaign to boycott the Games.

"I believe that even those athletes who go will not in fact take part in Olympic Games of the usual kind because athletes from so many countries will be absent," Mrs. Thatcher said.

However, British athletes are not expected to change their minds about going to Moscow.

In Tunis, capital of Tunisia, Vladimir Popov, a senior member of the organizing committee for the Moscow Olympics, said that 106 countries "have expressed their desire" to participate in the Games, but only 50 had confirmed their participation.

The Soviet official told a news conference he was "certain most European countries will participate."

And in Rome, the executive committee of the Italian Olympic Committee (CONI) expressed its regrets today over the U.S. boycott of the Games, but withheld for another month its own decision on whether Italy will go to Moscow.

The CONI committee called for Italian athletes to continue training in preparation for the Games, expressing its hope that they could make the trip.

Watson opens with torrid 65

CARLSBAD, Calif. (AP) — Tom Watson shot a seven-under-par 65 and missed the course record by a single stroke. But he's looking for improvement.

"Hopefully," he said with a grin, "I'll do better tomorrow."

Watson's 65 set the first-round pace Thursday in the $300,000 Tournament of Champions golf tournament.

"What I did was turn a 62 or 63 into a 65," Watson said. "I feel it could have been a very, very good round."

He one-putted 10 times.

"It's a matter of weight distribution," he said. "I was hitting too much off my right side, moving my weight too much to the right on the backswing."

The swing problem, which Watson said he had been fighting for a month, had produced a less than successful Masters for the man who has been the outstanding performer in the game for the last three years.

As the first man off the tee in the exclusive event that brings together only the winners of pro golf tour titles from the last 12 months, Watson got his score on the board first and forced the rest of the 30-man field into a catch-up position.

Hayden, Schulz grab final tenpin berths

Dot Hayden and Phil Schulz have grabbed the tenpin awards in the final week of the 17th annual Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest.

Rolling at Mayfair Lanes in the 26th week of competition, Dot topped the women's division with a 203-209-181 — 593 series in the Monday Night Mixed League and Phil steadily improved his tallies for a 218-225-247 — 690 series in the Victoria Mixed League to earn the men's award.

By winning awards, Hayden and Schulz qualified along with other weekly winners for the annual Bowler-of-the-Year tenpin rolloffs, scheduled for 1 p.m., April 27, at Mayfair.

Fivepin winners in the contest will compete for rolloff prizes on May 4 at Town and Country Lanes, also at 1 p.m.

Rolloffs will be determined on the basis of three-game scratch series. In the event of a tie, the bowler rolling the highest single game will be declared the winner.

Winners of the rolloffs will receive Bowler-of-the-Year trophies and any rolloff champion who is a daily subscriber to the Victoria Times will collect a bonus award of $150.

Rolloff contestants will not be required to pay bowling fees. Costs will be shared by the Victoria Times and the lanes involved.

Ailing Murphy in good form

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Bob Murphy, shaking off a dislocated shoulder, sank a 55-foot eagle putt and added four birdies for a course-record 29 on the back nine Thursday to take the first-round lead in the $100,000 Tallahassee Open golf tournament.

Murphy, whose last victory was in 1975, totaled a seven-under 65 for a two-stroke lead Gary Koch, hometown hope Rex Caldwell and rookie Tom Jones.

Murphy said he suffered his shoulder injury Monday as he awaited his plane at West Palm Beach.

"I came around a corner and ran into a guy," he said. "I was carrying a shoulderbag, and it jerked back and dislocated the right shoulder.

Marlene making big bid

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Marlene Floyd, seeking her first victory in five years on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour, tied her career best Thursday with a 67 for the first-round lead in the $100,000 Florida Lady Citrus Open.

After parring the front nine holes with a 36, Floyd birdied four holes and closed with an eagle for a six-under 31 going out.

The 32-year-old sister of PGA pro Raymond Floyd eagled the 450-yard 18th by reaching the green in two and sinking a 15-foot putt.

Floyd took a two-shot lead over tour rookie Marty Dickerson, former UCLA basketball player Janet Coles and tour veteran Hollis Stacey.

Six players tied at 70, including Canadian Sandra Post.

Gracious Japanese embarrass visitors

By MAX LOW

Just back from an exhausting but exciting trip to Japan, the Victoria YM-YWCA juvenile girls' volleyball team is bidding for its fifth straight B.C. title this weekend in Kelowna.

And, if they retain their provincial crown, they'll be off to Calgary to play in the national girls' volleyball championships May 9 to 11. The Victoria girls are also defending the national under-18 title they won last year but right now all they can talk about is the games they played and the new friends they made in Japan.

The Y juvenile team plus a few older girls from the club's junior (under-20) squad made up a tour party of 13 coached by Ron Greene and assistant Boeing Quan.

Although they ran into some pretty stiff opposition and, in fact, lost six of their eight games, the Victoria girls were billeted with Japanese families and were treated as visiting sports stars by both the volleyball officials and the press. A week before they arrived, Japanese-language newspapers in the northern cities of Morioka and Morbara carried long stories and published individual photographs of the Y girls.

"The Japanese people, particularly those in Morioka, were so kind to the girls and the hospitality was so overwhelming it was embarrassing," their coach said when they got back.

They weren't quite so kind to the Victoria girls on the court, though.

The Y girls opened on a winning note, edging Morioka High School All-Stars 8-15, 15-12, 16-14. And, though they were shaded 7-15, 15-10, 15-5, 9-15, 15-8 in a five-set thriller by Morioka Senior All-Stars and then beaten 10-15, 16-14, 15-3, 15-13 by Ichinoseki High School All-Stars, the Victorians beat Ichinoseki Senior All-Stars 16-14, 15-9, 15-10 to even their series at two wins and two losses.

So far so good. But then the Y girls ran up against Hitachi Mobara, the eighth-ranked company team in Japan, and were crushed 15-3, 15-3, 15-11. They played the Hitachi girls again the next day — but that wasn't any better for the Victoria squad as they went down 15-1, 15-5 this time!

Victoria then were humbled 15-5, 15-5 by the highly-rated Mobara Cultural High School and ended their tour with a 15-5, 15-3, 15-6 defeat at the hands of Tsukuba University, the second-ranked university team in the country.

Apart from the difficulty of getting victories on the court, the toughest thing the Canadian girls ran into was getting on and off the trains (they travelled by rail everywhere) with their bags, particularly in rush hour.

"The trains are just packed with people and there's nowhere to put any luggage," Greene explained. "Yet all the pushing and shoving to get on and off is accepted with a quiet kind of dignity."

And his girls accepted their defeats well, said the coach, who pointed out that although the level on the whole seems comparable to B.C., the standard in the high schools over there is very high.

"All their tournaments are straight knockouts," Greene said. "Teams get no second chance and the result is they play with a fanatical effort in every game."

Greene is the official volleyball registrar for B.C. (where we now have around 180 teams) and he said there is something like 12,000 registered teams in Japan.

"The Japanese are all so crazy on sport and, though baseball is number one for the spectators, as far as participation is concerned, volleyball is the most widely-played game in Japan," he explained.

But the emphasis on all sorts of sports really opened the Victoria girls' eyes.

A huge sports store they visited had a whole separate floor for baseball gear, then one for volleyball equipment, one for golf, one for tennis and so on.

And, said Green, if you can't sleep, you can walk across the playing fields of companies like Hitachi at 6 or 6:30 in the morning and see lots of people out practicing their baseball pitch or their golf swing.

Canadians lead

HYERES, France (CP) — Terry McLaughlin of Toronto, with crewmember Evert Bastet, had a first and a second in two races Thursday to take a clear lead in the Flying Dutchman class at the Hyeres Week of Yachting regatta.

The Toronto skipper, 23, scored a victory in the opening race of the series Sunday. The 27-country regatta then ground practically to a halt in the face of 64-kilometre-an-hour winds. The winds abated to between 15 and 24 kilometres Thursday.

Bastet, a stocky 29-year-old from Montreal who has crewed on a Flying Dutchman the last three Olympics, said the race Thursday was one of the toughest he's engaged in because "the wind shifted all the tiimé to 30 degrees."

Sims' agent warns Lions

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Detroit Lions would like to make Billy Sims their No. 1 pick in the National Football League draft April 29, but his agent says the club isn't offering enough money to sign Oklahoma's Heisman Trophy star.

Agent Kerry A. Argovitz said Detroit, the NFL's worst team at 2-14 last season, will lose Sims if they draft him unsigned.

"He'll either play in Canada or sit out a year," Argovitz said.

Trafficking in MDA nets six-year term

A 42-year-old Duncan man was sentenced in Victoria county court Thursday to six years in the penitentiary for two offences involving MDA.

Dale Stuart Elliott pleaded guilty earlier to possession of just over 11,000 capsules for the purpose of trafficking in 1973 and trafficking half a pound of MDA in 1977.

Judge Peter Millward sentenced him to 30 months on the first offence and 42 months on the second.

Elliott had served 14 months of the maximum 10 years provided by the Food and Drug Act on the first offence but appeals ultimately led to an acquittal and a new trial. He disappeared and was not found until Jan. 31, 1979.

Defence counsel Peter Freeman said Elliott had been in custody about 30 months on both offences. He described MDA as a mild hallucinegenic which was not included under the Food and Drug Act until 1968.

Millward said he was taking into account time already spent in custody, the nature of the drug, the need for deterrence of Elliott and others and the possibility of rehabilitation.

In another case, Judge Millward found a 26-year-old English visitor to Victoria guilty of possession of 10 grams of heroin but he was satisfied the possession was not for the purpose of trafficking.

He gave a suspended sentence and a year's probation to Geoffrey Charles Weymouth, who will be deported to the United Kingdom by immigration authorities within a week.

Millward found Weymouth's fiance, Janet Christine Stocker, 26, not guilty of possession of heroin.

A third person arrested at a James Bay house March 15, 1979, Jeffrey Michael Burant, 31, pleaded guilty during the trial to possession of seven grams of heroin for the purpose of trafficking. He will be sentenced next Thursday.

Weymouth and Stocker, who had been living in Islington, London, came to Victoria for a visit. Stocker will return home with Weymouth who has overcome his addiction to heroin, court was told.

In another case, Keith Bruce Erven was given a suspended sentence and three years probation for possession of cannabis resin for the purpose of trafficking in Nova Scotia in 1974.

The case took so long to come to court because the prosecution did not bring Erven to trial until 1976 and he was later successful before the Supreme Court of Canada in obtaining a new trial.

Judge E.J.C. Stewart said it was wrong for the prosecution in Nova Scotia to delay action against Erven for two years. He would not impose jail for a six-year-old offence and a fine would amount to a jail sentence because of Erven's financial circumstances so the only alternative left was probation.

Freighter's route traced

The freighter Samarkanda lost about half its average speed of 10 knots for five days before entering Sydney Inlet 50 kilometres northwest of Tofino, RCMP Stf. Sgt. Joseph Devison told a county court narcotics trial Thursday.

From charts and logs found aboard the ship, he charted a course starting 52 miles off Cape Manglares, Colombia, on what appeared to be April 30, 1979. She entered Canadian territorial waters off Cape Cook on May 21.

Devison was testifying at the trial of 23 men — 15 Colombians, seven Americans and a Costa Rican — who are accused of importing 33.5 tons of marijuana and possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking.

The jury, at its full complement of 12 after one took sick causing an adjournment, was excused until Wednesday because of a commitment by one of the defence lawyers, Josiah Wood, who has to be in the B.C. Court of Appeal and could not get an adjournment.

Devison said the Samarkanda was listing and aground in No Name Bay in Sydney Inlet at 6 a.m. May 22, 1979, but refloated herself on a rising tide between 9 and 10 a.m.

He agreed in cross-examination he cannot determine whether the Samarkanda's voyage started from any coastal point in Colombia. He said there was an indication in a log book of engine problems May 17 and 18 when the speed reduced from an average of about 10 knots to at times five knots.

Const. Ronald Tyler testified that he found a number of items aboard the pleasure craft Whitecap in Sydney Inlet.

Among them were return airline tickets to Seattle from Los Angeles in the names of two of the accused men, Jaime Marin, 38, of Marina del Rey, Calif., and Albergipson Frasser-Afanador, 39, of Los Angeles.

$45,000 awarded for crash

A 53-year-old woman was awarded almost $45,000 in B.C. Supreme Court in Victoria Thursday for injuries suffered in a 1977 traffic accident.

After a four-day trial over the issue of damages because liability was admitted, the jury gave Dorothea Jeanne Blais $39,460. The amount increases to almost $45,000 with of pre-judgment interest.

Court was told she suffered head, neck, back and arm injuries when a truck driven by Donald Dyck and owned by Dave Stubbs Construction Ltd. struck her vehicle on West Saanich Road on June 16, 1977.

'Emotional' bomb scare

TERRACE (UPC) — An American traveller, described as emotionally upset, was arrested Thursday after a Pacific Western Airlines flight to Vancouver was delayed because of a bomb threat.

A police spokesman said the man, "obviously suffering from emotional stress," became upset when ticket agents refused to put him on the flight he said he had reservations for because he did not have a ticket.

"When the agent wouldn't let the guy on the plane, he said, 'Oh well, I didn't want to go on that flight anyway because it's going to blow up,'" the spokesman said.

Police were called to the scene, but failed to find a bomb.

The 32-year-old man, who has a California address but had apparently been visiting Alaska, was to undergo psychiatric examination Friday before appearing before an immigration hearing in Vancouver, police said.

Beware of Campylobacter

By DEREK SIDENIUS

A family of bacteria which has been associated with food poisonings in Europe has been found in B.C.

And health officials say it could be as prevalent as salmonella which to now has been regarded as the principal cause of bacterial food poisonings here.

Dr. Allan Arneil, chief medical officer with the Capital Region District's community health services, said in an interview Thursday 17 cases of Campylobacter infections have been recorded in the area since January.

The symptoms include severe abdominal pains and violent diarrhea.

Arneil said the disease has only been recognized for about three years since a way was developed to isolate and cultivate the tiny, rod-shaped organism.

He said the cases that have come to light have been widely scattered throughout the region.

Most were associated with unsanitary conditions and poor personal habits but there is a suggestion some may have been infected by dogs and domestic animals which also carry the bacteria.

Dr. John Anderson, a bacteriologist at the University of B.C., said knowledge of the bacteria is relatively sparse.

While there are many different types of Campylobacter — cholera belongs to the family — the ways of identifying them are imperfect, he said.

Scientists feel the bacteria may be far more prevalent than first believed.

A recent study at York District Hospital in England showed that eight per cent of patients with gastro-intestinal problems were infected with Campylobacter compared with only five per cent infected with salmonella. (Viral infections lead the field by a considerable margin.)

Anderson said Campylobacter infections are more common in children but more harmful in adults.

It takes anywhere up to 10 days for symptoms to develop. The onset may be slow or sudden; in half the cases there is fever.

He said the main source of infection is human wastes but the bacteria has been found in animals as diverse as seagulls, pigeons, chickens and cows and it is possible they could be secondary sources.

There is one small comfort, however, Anderson said. The disease responds well to treatment.

Calling all volunteers

If all the volunteers in the city show up next Tuesday, the Georgian Lounge of the Empress Hotel could get mighty crowded.

The occasion will be the Victoria Volunteer Bureau's "recognition reception" from 4 to 6 p.m., and it will be opened by Lt.-Gov. Henry Bell-Irving.

The event is the highlight of Volunteer Recognition Week which starts Sunday.

The bureau estimates that one-quarter to one-third of all Victorians are volunteering time, energy and talents to enrich the community.

UVic pioneers counselling aid

University of Victoria psychologist Vance Peavy takes a new videotape teaching aid to Sweden this month for a study on adult counselling.

Assisted by four graduate students, Peavy made the tape to illustrate the role of a counsellor in three stages of solving personal problems.

They are: educational, where the subject has a study problem; in grief, to assist in return to active life and in career orientation for women trying to combine a job and family role.

Peavy was assisted by Marcia Hills, Diana Baxter, Cheryl Alexander and Norma Peterson, who scripted and acted out parts.

The film will be distributed through the university television productions library with technical operations by media and technical services and Murray Edwards' UVic theatre courses.

Peavy is taking the film to the World Congress on Counselling at University of Stockholm, where he will lecture on creativity in counselling and the status of counselling in Canadian schools.

1,500 visit Science Fair

Of 68 elementary and high school level entrants, Glen Lyon won in the overall category with a project on computer genetic analysis by Grade 10 student Brad Forth.

Highest award for the junior division went to Glen Lyon Grade 9 student Philip Spencer whose entry dealt with wave motion and interference.

First prize for elementary school projects was given to Margaret Orme, of Grade 7, at Gordon Head Elementary.

More than 1,500 visitors saw the projects displayed at the university's physics building.

The event was sponsored by the Society for the Advancement of Young Scientists.

Flying firemen on red alert to save forests

By AB KENT

Fourteen aircraft and 28 pilots are on the flight line at Vancouver Island bases in readiness to attack forest fires in the 1980 fire season which opened this week.

According to early forecasts this year could be a repeat of a bad fire season in 1979.

But most of the island-based pilots and flying tankers will serve outside the province under contracts with Alberta and Manitoba forest services.

If there are fires in Vancouver Island woods, Abbotsford-based Conair Aviation Ltd. will supply some of its 15 water bombers under contract to B.C. Forest Service and flown from a total of 20 summer bases around the province.

Two companies operate fixed wing water tankers from Vancouver Island bases — both using flying boats which can pick up fresh loads by skimming the surface of lakes within ready reach of a fire.

Flying Fireman Ltd., of Patricia Bay airport has eight Canso flying boats, one more than last year, each with 800-gal. capacity.

One will be kept at Pat Bay ready for roving assignments and the rest of the aircraft will spend the summer in Alberta and Manitoba.

Forest Industries Flying Tankers Ltd., owned by a consortium of five forest companies, bases two 6,000-gal. Martin Mars flying boats at Sproat Lake. These serve the owners primarily and are not contracted out but will assist the forest service when required.

Also available for quick-strike firefighting are 24 island-based commercial helicopters capable of carrying 120-gal. water drop drums to douse fires in the early stages. Two others are operated by Flying Tankers as support for the Mars bombers.

Vancouver Island Helicopters Ltd., of Pat Bay, has machines scattered up-island and along the coast with bases at Prince Rupert, Kitsault and Stewart, each with access to company-owned drop buckets and fire retardant mixture.

About eight other helicopters fly from island bases, including those owned by Okanagan Helicopters from Campbell River and Port McNeill, Highland Helicopters at Tahsis and McGillivary Helicopters at Nanaimo.

Chief pilot Mike Pearson, of Flying Fireman, said 1979 was one of the company's biggest years. Operational flights counted for about 2,000 hours, two to three times normal.

His 20 pilots are under four-month contracts of which the first two weeks consist of training flights. In a busy season they could each earn $30,000 for their hazardous work.

Despite the age of the Second World War Canso aircraft, none have as much as 6,000 hours of flying time logged, and add only 100-200 hours a year giving them many potential years of service.

Pearson cites the venerable DC-3, dating from the late 1930s and 1940s, many of which are still flying with 70,000 hours behind them. Both aircraft use the same engines which remain plentiful though no longer manufactured.

Chief pilot Mike Pearson waits with one of the Canso water bombers and a Cessna "bird dog"

But even the price of old-fashioned aircraft is subject to inflation. A complete Canso, available for a song after the war, costs $400,000 today, Pearson said.

Don Owen, head of BCFS fire protection branch, draws a logical conclusion from the fact that the snow pack in B.C. is deficient and that winter rains were less than usual.

"Without spring rains in April and May, we could be into an early firefighting season," he said.

Fires have already broken out since last weekend. One at Bella Coola was caused by a logging operator and several in the Cariboo were attributed to carelessness.

The forest service relies on land-based tankers flown by Conair. These are all ex-military craft, consisting mainly of A 26 conversions. There are also some DC-6s and three new Fire Cat conversions of the familiar maritime patrol Tracker.

DC-6s have the largest tank capacity, 2,500 gals.

The forest service also has a new tool for quick strikes against embryo fires — the Rapattack, for which three helicopters are chartered.

Crews of young, physically fit men are trained to rappel down ropes from hovering helicopters to inaccessible fires such as remote lightning strikes. They use chainsaws and shovels to prepare a helicopter landing site and do what they can to contain the fire until a suppression crew with more equipment can be flown in.

These will be based mainly at Kamloops, their training centre, where about 24 men will stand ready. Another 20 will be at Riske Creek and 8-10 at Lower Post. Any will be available for firefighting on Vancouver Island when needed, Owen said.

A quickie report by Capital Region District staff on the bridge-tunnel link to the mainland drew some snarky comments from one director at a planning meeting this week.

Victoria Ald. Bob Wright, a B.C. Ferries board member, said he was suprised regional board staff bothered.

"Even if you only spent 30 minutes on it, that's too long," Wright told planners.

The report said a bridge-tunnel connection being promoted by Science and Technology Minister Pat McGeer would bring economic benefits to Vancouver Island, reduce the need for inconvenient ferry travel but would probably have adverse environmental impact on the Gulf Islands and drive up land values making housing difficult to obtain.

Wright said the government has no business looking at a tunnel for another 20 or 30 years.

"I've always been under the impression that if you ignore it, it will go away," he commented.

Nature-loving Saanich council this week picked several members of the animal kingdom to represent the municipality.

After a brief argument aldermen decided to replace the bear on its new coat-of-arms with a cougar and send the design to the College of Arms in England for approval.

The coat-of-arms will have the corporate seal in the middle, a deer on one side, a cougar on the other, and a swan on top. Traditional helmet and fancy border complete the design.

The approval process takes some time and municipal staff don't expect the coat-of-arms to be ready before Saanich's 75th birthday in 1981.

Tindall brushes off legal doubt: harbor centre aid is above board

By NORMAN GIDNEY

Mayor Bill Tindall today questioned the legal advice from city solicitor Jakob de Villiers and said he can see no roadblocks in the way of Victoria assisting the waterfront convention centre.

"There is some misunderstanding or misinterpretation. Jakob is just expressing his own opinion here," the mayor said in an interview.

"There are no serious legal roadblocks."

A report by de Villiers to city council says the city's 1979 pledge to pay $200,000 a year to cover losses of the centre (to be built by the Provincial Capital Commission and run by the Pan Pacific Conference and Trade Centre Society) has no basis in law.

"It is beyond the powers of council to enter into any agreement to pay such operating losses," says de Villiers in the report requested by council.

But Mayor Tindall said there are at least four ways of doing this, all above board. One is the suggestion of the Chamber of Commerce to raise the business tax to cover the deficit. Another is a section in the act which the city used a while ago to donate the Crystal Garden to the province.

This would require the annual approval of the minister of municipal affairs.

"We have not suggested it be done in any illegal or unorthodox manner," said Tindall.

Borrowing a phrase from de Villiers' report, the mayor said the lawyer's five-page survey "doesn't tell the whole story." For example, De Villiers said he assumed from the absence of direct council motions that the city intended to donate the $1.7 million parkade to the province which it has promised to build.

The mayor said this was not true, that council and its finance committee followed a careful step by step procedure and its first motion on the subject dated November, 1978 endorses a government proposal that the parkade be city-owned and operated.

Ald. Robin Blencoe, who asked for the report, said the de Villiers report convinces him more than ever that the Pan Pacific group should not be allowed to control the centre.

He wants a joint municipal-provincial board in control. It would bring in "objective management" to run the centre, after a thorough review of the whole project to determine if another location can be found. Pan Pacific could remain as an advisor.

"It's just asking for trouble," the alderman said of the present plan to install the Pan Pacific group in control.

"You can see what happened with this. I think it's been full steam ahead and never mind the legalities or the rights of the community."

It is unclear exactly who will own and operate the centre. De Villiers said in his report he has seen draft agreements between Pan Pacific and the PCC which provide for the whole centre to be leased to the businessmen's group.

The mayor said this morning the PCC is going to be owner and operator, with a management board on which Pan Pacific would have several seats.

PCC minutes released by Blencoe dated Oct. 3, 1979 state that Pan Pacific will be the operating agency, although the city and province each will have two members on the board.

De Villiers outlines three possible ways of overcoming the legal difficulties, the simplest of them for the city to lease the centre from the province and operate it as a municipal business.

This would eliminate Pan Pacific, the non-profit organization of downtown businessmen who have been working more than a year with the B.C. government's capital commission to get the centre going.

Two other solutions would keep Pan Pacific in the saddle as operator and manager of the centre, but they are more complicated, according to de Villiers.

The city's lawyer makes no recommendations in his report, but it appears from a careful reading that the first option — a city takeover — would be the simplest from a legal standpoint. The Municipal Act allows a municipality to operate such a business.

"In that event there would be no tax liability and there would be no requirement on the part of the city to make any contribution to the operating losses of another party," says de Villiers.

"Whether council would wish to accept the responsibility of operating the convention centre and whether the province would be willing to pay the city half the operating losses are not, of course, matters on which I can comment."

If council does take this route, de Villiers says the $1.7 million the city has promised for the parkade could be paid to the capital commission as the rental of the premises for the term of the lease.

City's taxpayers facing $1M tab for centre

Victoria taxpayers are going to have to pay at least $1 million over the next seven years to keep the waterfront convention centre afloat, according to Provincial Capital Commission documents.

Under a Jan. 30, 1979 city council resolution, Victoria is committed to pay half the annual losses, with its share no more than $200,000 a year, in 1978 dollars adjusted annually for inflation.

Council also agreed to pay any municipal property taxes. If the whole $8 million project was a commercial venture, taxes would be around $200,000 a year.

However, it's expected most of the project will be exempt. Mayor Bill Tindall said today if the Provincial Capital Commission remains the owner and operator of the centre, then only those parts leased to retail operators — a restaurant for example — would be taxable.

Minutes of the PCC made public by Ald. Robin Blencoe last week indicate for the first time what it's going to cost to operate the convention centre at Wharf and Fort, due to open in the spring of 1982.

The centre will incur losses even before it opens its doors because of startup costs. The city's share for this period is estimated at $190,000.

Revenue figures are calculated in 1979 dollars and escalated by seven per cent for inflation, according to the capital commission minutes, but it does not say whether the same formula is used for expenses.

Estimated losses start to mount after the centre opens. In the first full year, fiscal 1982-83, operating costs are pegged at $868,200 and revenue at $513,000 leaving a deficit of $355,200 — half to be picked up by city taxpayers.

The annual operating losses decline over the following years, according to the PCC estimates, to $208,900 in 1986-87.

The total amount expected from the city over this seven-year period is almost $1 million. PCC budget projections doesn't extend beyond 1986-87.

That doesn't take into account the $90,000 annual revenue expected from the city-owned parkade, which Victoria city council has agreed to build at a cost of $1.7 million. None of the construction costs will come directly off homeowners' property tax bills, however.

Some $1,274,000 will come out of the city's off street parking reserve fund, which is all the nickels and dimes stuffed in parking meters by motorists.

Another $60,000 will come from the Broughton Street parkade in the basement of the new Waddington building, a provincial government office complex. The city operates the parkade and shares profits with the province. Another $374,000 will come from profits of the Victoria parking commission, the civic body which actually runs the municipal parkades.

Crash kills two at Chemainus

Two Port Alberni residents were killed Thursday in a two-vehicle head-on collision near Chemainus.

RCMP identified the victims as Laurence Hart, 65, and Margaret Doherr, 46.

The two, neighbors, were returning home in Hart's Volkswagen van after a day in Victoria when the crash occurred at 3:50 p.m. on the Trans Canada Highway 2½ kilometres north of Chemainus.

Randolph Falk, 19, of Chemainus, the driver of the other vehicle, a pickup truck, suffered only minor cuts and was treated at Chemainus hospital and later released. Two passengers in his vehicle escaped injury.

Police said Mrs. Doherr was killed instantly and Hart died while being rushed by ambulance to hospital in Victoria.

Ask the Times

Q. My wife and I are visiting your sun-drenched (?) Pacific metropolis. Our city map shows Battleford Avenue in large black type. I was born and raised in historic old Battleford in northwest Saskatchewan. Could you advise how this name for the avenue was arrived at? K.C.

A. Because this is one of the oldest streets in the area the exact reason for naming it is not available in any books. But the Provincial Archives believe it was named Battleford because it was near the railroad tracks, like the original battle which took place at the fort on the Battle River in Saskatchewan. This bears credence when you notice that a nearby street here is called Regina Avenue.

Contract Bridge B. Jay Becker

You are South, both sides vulnerable. The bidding has been:

West	North	East	South
1♥	1♠	Pass	?

1. ♠Q6 ♥KJ94 ♦AJ3 ♣KQJ5
2. ♠K932 ♥74 ♦AQ872 ♣93
3. ♠AQ74 ♥5 ♦K83 ♣KQJ96
4. ♠J5 ♥QJ82 ♦AJ9 ♣AJ64

1. Three notrump. A jump to game is clearly indicated. True, North's spade bid doesn't promise the World's Fair, since it is usually based on less than opening bid values, but still there must be some kind of trick-taking potential indicated by the overcall.

Two notrump would be an underbid and would merely urge North to bid again, without compelling him to do so. Partner should not be given a chance to fall short of the mark when it is clear that game must be reached.

2. Two spades. It is best to show the spade support at once. To bid two diamonds at this point would be begging the issue without accomplishing anything. Sometimes you hear players say that two diamonds in this sequence indicates spade support, but this is a gross misconception of proper bidding technique. The right way to show spade support is by raising spades; the right way to deny spade support is by naming a new suit.

There isn't much hope for game, but, even so, it is important to tell partner right away that you have trump support and at least a moderate hand.

3. Four spades. This is no time to be picking daisies; you have the values for game and you should express them forthwith. To invite partner to bid game by raising him to only three spades would be dead wrong, because you might get left at the post.

It is neither necessary nor desirable to mention the clubs. Partner will see them as soon as dummy comes down.

4. Two notrump. You can't take unilateral action here, since the possibility of game depends chiefly on whether North's overcall is based on minimum, medium or maximum values. He may have as few as 7 points or as many as 13, but he is in a far better position to know what he has than you are.

So you leave the decision on how far to go to your partner, acting on the sensible basis that he is just as anxious to bid and make a game as you are.

Before the judge

Bail was denied Thursday in Victoria provincial court to a 34-year-old man charged in connection with a fatal traffic accident Wednesday in Saanich.

Donald Leroy Gibson, of 1976 Glenidle in Sooke, was charged with criminal negligence causing the death of 17-year-old Brett Fisher, failing to remain at the scene of an accident, having care and control of a vehicle while impaired, and refusing a breath test demand.

Fisher, of 1126 Temple, was riding his bicycle north in the 4200-block Glanford when he was struck by a vehicle heading in the same direction. The victim was taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital with severe head injuries and died shortly after 9 p.m., about three hours after the mishap.

Judge Harold Alder handed out a suspended sentence and a year's probation to a 19-year-old youth who planted a bomb in a fellow employee's car as a prank.

Artel made an oxy-acetylene bomb and hooked it up to a spark plug of a coworker's vehicle Nov. 21. He then requested the victim to move his car and, when the engine was started, the bomb exploded, causing $300 damage but no injuries.

Artel pleaded guilty Monday in Victoria County Court to possession of an air rifle for a purpose dangerous to the public peace and was given a suspended sentence and a year's probation. That incident took place April 22 at a store on Esquimalt Road after a man who was drunk spat at and insulted Artel, who mistook him for someone else, court was informed. Artel was also ordered to perform 30 hours of community service work and was prohibited from owning or possessing firearms for five years.

Two men who pleaded guilty to being unlawfully at large received jail sentences from Ostler.

Darrell Lee Oldham, 21, of Port Alberni received a one-month term for being at large from Jordan River prison camp March 8.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan said Oldham was serving a six-month term imposed Feb. 15 in Port Alberni for theft over $200 and theft under $200 and went missing shortly after a routine check at 6:30 p.m.

George Roy James, 37, of 14 Cooper, was given a 14-day term.

Court was informed James was serving a four-month sentence at Wilkinson Road jail for impaired driving, driving while suspended, and assaulting a peace officer when he failed to return from a day pass Arpil 1.

Mulligan said James was given the temporary absence pass so that he could look for employment and failed to return by 4 p.m.

Duty legal aid lawyer Steven Kelliher said James had 11 days remaining in his sentence and did spend the morning looking for a job.

However, Kelliher added, James stopped at a bar in the afternoon and had a few drinks with his nephew, who told him of a dancing ceremony in the Long House to which James belonged.

Kelliher said James felt an "overwhelming requirement" to attend the ceremonial dancing.

A 41-year-old woman who pleaded guilty to her fifth, sixth, and seventh drinking-driving charges was given a total of four months in jail and Ostler recommended she serve the sentence at Twin Maples where there was alcohol counselling.

Court was told the first incident occurred about 11 p.m. when Colwood RCMP noticed her vehicle swaying from one side of the road to the other in the 2500-block Sooke Road. Subsequent breath test readings of .35 and .36 were obtained, Mulligan said.

On Feb. 22, she was found unconscious and slumped over the steering wheel of her vehicle, which still had the motor running, about 6:15 p.m. Readings on that occasion were .25 and .27.

On April 11, she was stopped about 3:10 p.m. along Goldstream Avenue. Two readings of .22 were obtained.

She was convicted of impaired driving June 30, 1969, Aug. 6, 1975, Oct. 1, 1975, and Jan. 15, 1976, getting fines on the first three convictions and a 14-day jail term on the fourth.

Defence lawyer Adrian Chaster said his client had spent some time at the Twin Maples facilities and it would not assist her to go back. He said she was able to make her own wine in the kitchen there.

Ostler replied that jail would assist the public and handed out concurrent sentences of one, two, and four months. He also placed the woman on 18 months probation after her release.

volunteering

A little quiz on volunteering — answer true or false:

1. There are over 4 million volunteers in Canada.

2. In North America there are as many men who volunteer as women.

3. In the Greater Victoria area between one-quarter and one-third of the population do volunteer work.

4. Through the Victoria Volunteer Bureau 4,176 people were placed in volunteer jobs in the last five years.

5. Since 1975 there has been a 90 per cent increase in volunteers coming through the bureau.

The economic value of volunteer work in Canada has never been included in the Gross National Product. However, a study in 1971 calculated it at least 3.3 per cent — more than twice that of the very large pulp and paper industry. The study did not count church volunteers, board members and citizens' committees.

Volunteering is often stereotyped as the occupation of middle-aged women. In Victoria, the fact is that almost 50 per cent of volunteers are men.

In Victoria, given that about 28 per cent of the population volunteers, it means over 6,000 people give some time to others. At the estimated average time of 3 hours per person per week that is 18,000 hours of work done per week in this area. At minimum wage, this represents close to $3 million a year. In economic terms it is plain that volunteers create an enormous impact on a community.

At the Victoria Volunteer Bureau, which handles only a portion of the volunteers in Victoria, interest in volunteering has been steadily increasing. Whether this is an accurate reflection of a growing trend in volunteering, or mainly the result of better publicity is unknown. However an interesting Bureau statistic points out that by far the biggest percentage of interested people contacting the Bureau heard of this service through the column you are now reading.

Volunteering is a big thing in Victoria, as well as the rest of Canada and the continent. A lot is going on in the world of volunteering. Without volunteers it would be impossible to sustain the level of services provided in a community. Services we have come to see as "necessary" would not simply be reduced, or unburdened of all "frills" — some would be completely eliminated.

If fewer volunteers were available programs would at first be reduced. Consequently, in many cases, government and other funds providing agency building, materials, and salaries for basic staff might be withdrawn, with the resulting disappearance of the agency itself.

Consider several groups in Victoria — what would happen if the volunteer staffs were removed? Silver Threads Services has 900 volunteers; Juvenile Detention Home, 115; Royal Jubilee Hospital, 240; Canadian National Institute for the Blind, 115.

The time put in by volunteers is only the tip of the iceberg. Besides the economic problems associated with a lack of volunteers there are other pressures. In government agencies and those groups not likely to completely disappear without volunteers, it is apparent that the ability to cope with a growing number of users (patients, inmates, residents,) would deteriorate. More pressure would be put on paid staff, resulting in lower quality of work, high turnover rates, and lowering of morale. Often, when services have to be cut, some groups of people find themselves either without any help or in the wrong kind of care. This is now the case with some elderly people in some regions of Canada. It, in turn, can restrict services to other groups.

The picture is bleak when we remove volunteers. But that, happily, is not the case in Victoria. On most areas of concern sufficient volunteers insure that things run smoothly. Consider some of the things done by volunteers in this city. In its 21 hour telethon last March the B.C. Lions Society raised $115,425 for disabled children. The funds will go to the new Easter Seal Camp Shawnigan. The United Way, with the help of 1500 volunteers, collected $1,006,000 in its 1979 campaign. Already, 100 volunteers are preparing for Fall, 1980. In the past year about 46 young boys and girls have been matched up with Big Brothers and Sisters in Victoria. Now approximately 23 Big Sisters and 61 Big Brothers regularly share activities with these younger people, offering them support and friendship. NEED Crisis Line regularly handles 1000 calls per month, often intervening in crisis situations where callers have nowhere else to turn. Even the Pacific Opera Association, with 150 volunteers, would be unable to give Victoria the pleasure of its musical productions without volunteers.

Volunteer Recognition Week begins on Sunday; from April 20 to 26 attention will be focused on the contributions and accomplishments of volunteers. Please think about what volunteering means to our community, and join with us all in giving a big thank you to volunteers!

The Victoria Volunteer Bureau is open for inquiries from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. from Monday to Friday. Please phone 386-2269.

Glanford turns out in spades

By AUDREY JOHNSON

One of the largest representations of any Greater Victoria School in the Victoria Music Festival is being made by one of the medium size elementary schools.

Out of an enrolment of 371, choir, speech and dance entries involve an impressive 75 per cent of the students. In dance alone this week, there are 11 entries.

Glanford has several dance clubs — creative, folk, jazz and rhythmics — in which Grades 2 to 7 participate, physical ed teacher Jean Bunch tells you. These are extra-curricular activities and children eagerly spend time before classes in the morning and in the late afternoon and early evening, participating.

As co-ordinator of the school dance section of the festival, assisted by Penny Walker of Torquay School, Mrs. Bunch was in the middle of a busy week when interviewed but her zeal and enthusiasm for the work and the school came through with the freshness of day one.

On Friday afternoons there is a fine arts club in which all sorts of things from clay modelling to macrame are explored.

But Glanford students are also active and good in sports. This year the school's girls' field hockey and basketball teams won the city elementary school championships.

Jean says two factors are involved in all this constructive activity: a wonderfully dedicated staff who invest a lot of time and energy to provide the youngsters with challenge and stimulation; and terrific parental support.

It's a mother for example who directs the jazz dance club. Parents make all the dance costumes and take on other more difficult construction chores.

One of this year's festival entries involves tiny primary graders doing a hobby horse number. Mothers have produced a stable of undeniably the most beautiful "horses" anyone could imagine.

Handsome heads in colorful fabrics, firmly molded and stuffed, with flashing eyes and wooly manes, bridled and belled, tempt anyone with imagination to mount and go galloping off.

There is a full-time music program under Shirley Campbell, the work mostly choral at the present time although recorders are used extensively.

It doesn't seem strange to this reporter that Glanford has one of the lowest absentee rates in city schools, although Principal Robert McKay is non-commital on the point.

Still it does make sense to believe that with so many interesting things happening as addenda to the regular study program, youngsters don't want to miss a school day.

Jean sums up by saying that it is all a team effort involving teachers, students and parents in a determination to acquire skills and experiences that are pleasurable as well as useful. And to offer incentive to keep the kids occupied, interested and happy.

Roy Cohn the lawyer complained the whole time he was describing a new charitable undertaking, but underneath there appeared to pure glee. Prisoners Accelerated Creative Exposure, an organization that conducts music and arts programs in the prisons, approached him to help them with a fund-raising event. He agreed, savoring the implications of "a complete turnabout in my role — I'm supposed to be a law and order man." The event will take the form of an art auction at his Manhattan townhouse. The true reason for his delight: The group's board includes prominent liberals Jules Feiffer, Dick Gregory and William Kunstler, whom Cohn considers his archfoe. "I never thought an organization associated with Kunstler would come to me," Cohn said, "but they said they needed a strong friend."

Tim Wynne-Jones is a man of many talents — one of which has won him $50,000. Wynne-Jones, 31, a Toronto painter, designer, actor, singer and visualarts teacher, won the money in the third annual Seal Books first novel contest. He was pouring drinks as a bartender at a Toronto hotel when he was telephoned and told about the prize, the world's second largest literary cash award. The Nobel Prize is the largest. His book, Odd's End, is a thriller about the exploits of a psychopath.

Feminist Betty Friedan says the "he-man mystique" is dead and North American men are about to tumble into a lonely macho abyss. Friedan predicts a radical shift in identity that will parallel the women's movement of the 1970s. "Men are at the edge of a tidal wave of change — a change in their very identity as men," Friedan predicts. She says male "hostility" towards the women's movement has turned to "envy" of the way women support each other.

Time magazine has the entire state of Kansas moving northward, to a point somewhere above Nebraska. The magazine says the mistake on a map prepared to illustrate population growth since 1970 occurred in an overlay — not on the actual map drawn by artist Paul Pugliese. Says cartographer Debra Wells, who researched the map at Time headquarters in New York, "We just made an error ... Of course I know where Kansas is located. That's where Dorothy lives."

Dear Abby:

Recently to celebrate a 70th birthday (mine), a group of couples went to a very fine restaurant. Our middle-aged waitress was wearing a tight black skirt slit up to her waist. Each time she came down the short stairway she showed a very shapely leg. We all remarked about it during dinner.

Upon leaving — meaning to compliment her — I said, quietly, "That's a pretty decent exposure," whereupon she shouted so all could hear, "Why, you dirty old man!"

My wife, coming up behind me, demanded, "Did you pinch her?" Everyone in our party and most of the people in the restaurant had a good laugh — at my expense.

I quickly went back and pocketed the generous tip I had left for her. Abby, if they flaunt it, shouldn't they be complimented? and was I wrong to have pocketed the tip?

Tipped Off

Dear Tipped:

When they flaunt it, even if you enjoy it, ignore it. You shouldn't have pocketed the tip. If the waitress served your party well, she earned it — even if she does have a big mouth. It's a wonder she didn't shout as you left, "You cheap old man!"

Dear Abby:

When my mother-in-law handed me my Christmas gift last year she said, "You don't seem like the type who would like this, so if you don't want it, please give it back to me because I love it!"

Abby, I was in a no-win situation, As I unwrapped it, I was hurt to think that she would give me a gift she knew I wouldn't like. Well, she was right. It was a gaudily decorated trinket box, in terrible taste and about as useless as anything could be. It was obvious that she wanted me to give it back to her. Well, I'm not in the habit of telling people I don't like their gifts, so I told her I thought it was "interesting" and kept it. She seemed surprised and disappointed.

As time went by, every time I look at that ugly useless box I became angry, so I donated it to a charity for a white elephant sale just to get it out of my sight.

What should I say if one day my mother-in-law asks to see that box?

Gave Up

Dear Gave Up:

Tell her the truth. She had it coming, (The truth, not the box.)

World comes to class

By LON WOOD

When Dave Stott stood in front of the class at Hillcrest school and spoke Swahili, no one understood.

"But at least one boy knew how to spell it," said Stott, "and all were fascinated."

Stott, who once taught in Kenya and picked up more than a little of the national language, was at the Saanich elementary school Thursday giving grades six and seven students in Bob Hehn's class a talk on the East African country.

He said the class was well-prepared with general information on Kenya but pupils were surprised to learn that "it is not all jungles and lions and Tarzan" as often portrayed by Hollywood.

"They learned that most Africans dress as we do, go to school like us, and so on," said Stott — who performed some modern African tunes on old instruments he brought to the school.

When told that Hillcrest students had recently shipped 17 tea chests of text books to a school in Botswana, Stott told the class that the Kenyan school he had taught at received 17 chests of books when he was there.

"The Saanich kids really enjoyed getting a first-hand impression of how important those books are in that situation," he said.

Stott is one of a pool of 28 Victoria International Development Education Association (Videa) Schools Resource Program people who have either experienced living in developing countries — or different countries in Africa, Asia and Latin America — or have studied international development issues and are able to give talks in their areas of expertise.

"We are a mixed group of people," said Stott, program co-ordinator. "Most are people with university degrees; some are students; a good many have worked overseas professionally.

"We have people ranging from university professors through agriculturists to teachers, linguists, graphic artists — and we're always looking for more people interested in volunteering to speak to these youngsters."

The program is sponsored by the School Board of Greater Victoria. To book a classroom speaker, teachers can pick from a list sent out through the school board — or they can contact Videa directly by telephoning Stott at the Videa office at 385-2333 Monday to Thursday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. — preferably with two weeks advance notice.

Videa's main goal is to stimulate awareness of international development issues — the who, what, why where and how of two thirds of our world, says Stott.

For teacher Hehn, Stott's visit was the fourth by Videa speakers in recent months.

"The quality of speakers ranges from 'okay' to 'excellent'," he said today. "David spoke on Kenya, and we've had one on India, one on Chile. Dr. Jan Walls spoke on China and he was excellent."

Hehn said talks range from 45 to 75 minutes and that his class usually prepares for a question period taking about 20 minutes of that time.

"It has certainly been helpful having a resource group such as this to call on. I find that while the speakers pick the topic, they most often able and willing to expand on their subject — and the students certainly get involved. They pay attention and are eager to pick up all they can."

Judy Matthew's topic is village life in India. Using slides, books, clothing and descriptions of her own experiences, she has so far spoken to three classes of grade six students.

"One of the first points I make is that what I can tell in about an hour is only one small portion of India," she said. "I talk about my personal experience and how it affected my outlook; what contacts I have retained with the country . . . then I show slides of a small village (Mirzapur) in the state of Uttar Pradesh where I lived for three months. That covers daily activities of washing, gathering and preparing food, school activity, recreation, and family life generally."

Matthew

In the ensuing discussion period, she says, there is always enthusiasm.

"Most classes have found there are a lot of similarities and that the kids there have the same aspirations as here.

"Of course they are interested in everything else from wanting to know what a monsoon is like and to know the kind of hospitality I received. The latter was an easy one to answer — it was second to none."

Matthew said all students had studied India in their social studies classes and had a basic background in geography and history. Some had done individual research projects on India and were more familiar with the area.

"I am there as a resource person — to make it more personal," she said.

Originally from Edmonton, Matthew describes herself as "an unemployed traveller." After graduation from university in Alberta she journeyed to India with Canadian Crossroads International. Later, she moved on to Mexico and West Africa and is now fully committed to promoting international awareness.

"Travelling in another country makes a very personal connection," she said. What happens in a country I have been in makes me concerned. I know people living there. There welfare is at stake."

Dosil

In Victoria, Matthew is currently involved with the International Development Committee at the YM-YWCA.

"In a bit I will be leaving to work for Canada World Youth, a program for education of young people on an international scale."

Estela Dosil, a linguist, is from Buenos Aires, Argentina. She came to Victoria years ago on vacation with her graphic designer husband and their daughter and they decided to stay.

As a Videa resource person she offers her impressions of Argentina and Spain to both elementary and secondary students.

"The children are very interested and very curious — their responses are incredible. They want to know more about the countries they go by so quickly in their general studies," she says. "And the sad thing is, take the grownups of today — they have no idea of the world because for most of them this is how they were educated also."

Last week LeeAnn Johnsonwent out to the schools to tell of her times in Korea, The Phillipines and Malaysia. Next week it could be Tecle Sebahatu giving a rundown on Eritrean culture and economics; Betty Andrews on schooling in Nigeria; Norma Armour on Mexico; Helen Morgan on Bolivia and so on.

Patients should cut guilt from illness

By DR. L.L. COLEMAN

"Could my illness be psychosomatic?" is a question that is commonly asked doctors. In this age of psychological understanding, patients have a deep awareness of the relationship between symptoms and emotional tensions.

Occasionally, patients may feel guilty because they seem to complain too much about a physical ailment, almost as if they have no right to be sick. This can do the patient a great injustice. Families and, occasionally, even doctors, burdened by the incessant bombardment of complaints of symptoms, tend to suggest that there may be some psychological basis for the patient's problems.

It is now firmly recognized that all disease entails the interaction of body and mind. The mind (psyche) and the body (soma) are a fixed unity, and they collaborate with each other in the total tapestry of health and disease.

Physicians will often state that they never, but never, see a patient with any illness who does not have some emotional overtone in addition to the physical problem.

It is well recognized that some diseases — such as asthma, ulcers of the stomach and ulcerative colitis — may be psychogenic in origin. The word "psychogenic" means "born in the mind." This is totally different from the psychosomatic overtones that are found in almost all medical problems.

The extension of this concept is that the modern practice of medicine cannot be totally effective unless all the social and psychological elements of living are taken into consideration by the doctor who treats a physical illness.

Patients have a right to be concerned and afraid. The unknown can be terrifying.

Despite massive educational campaigns, many people still delay having elective surgery that is recommended by their doctors. Even after a second confirmatory opinion, some patients will delay an operation beyond a reasonably expected time. Consequently, simple surgery can often be converted into complex and difficult operations.

I am thinking particularly of a patient who needed repair of a hernia. This operation is safe and relatively simple. Because no pressure was made on him, he kept putting it off for years. One day, a small piece of intestine was caught in the hernial opening. This necessitated immediate emergency surgery. A simple operation with a short period of convalescence was converted to an involved operation with a long-drawn-out period of convalescence.

Dear Mr. Vichert: My problem is I'm lonely. You see, I always sit home on Saturday nights and listen to sad songs on the radio. I'm 14 years of age and my parents think I'm too young to go out. I'm not all that bad looking yet I still don't attract anybody.

My sister is also this way. She's 17 and has never gone out on a date. I don't want to sound cruel but I don't want to end up like her.

Answer: It is difficult to sit at home and believe that everyone else is out having a much better time than you are. This is not true as there are many parents who do not want their children to be out, or there are other people your age who find that they do not have any plans for Saturday night and have to make their own plans. About the worse thing that you can do is sit at home and feel sorry for yourself and hope that someone else will come along and solve your problem.

Dear Dr. Powell: I'm a 14-year-old boy and my problem is I'm short, about 4 foot 9. But my legs are very muscular, this is because I'm very physically active. My mother is 4 foot 8 and my dad is 5 foot and I was wondering if their heights would affect mine. I have two older brothers, one is quite tall — he is in Grade 11 — and the other one is in university and he is about the same height as me. Why is my older brother taller than my oldest brother?

I'm in great need of your advice because I'm very depressed about being the shortest among my friends. Can I eat special foods or go on special diets to grow?

Answer: Height is determined by the genes we inherit from each parent. There are no special diets or exercises you can do to make you taller but you can talk to your doctor. He can do tests to find out whether you will grow taller or whether you will have just started to grow later than most of your friends. Boys will often continue to grow throughout their teens and not reach their full height until they are 19 or 20.

Dear Dr. Levine: I have been living in a situation that just seems to get worse. I haven't seen my father since birth. My mother had him move away because he had an extreme alcohol problem. All my life I have tried to make substitutes, but it just doesn't seem to be enough. I come from a fairly large family and the rest seem to not worry or think about it.

But I can't stop thinking about it. For all my life I thought about it but now it seems to take up most of my thoughts. I would love to know what it's like having a father.

Answer: I'm sure you know that many adopted kids have made attempts during adolescence or even adulthood to contact their natural parents, and agencies have of late been increasingly co-operative in this regard.

Your situation is considerably different. Of course you have a "right" to meet your father. But it sounds like he left because he was a destructive influence on the family, in part at least due to his serious alcoholism.

You may have some difficulties. You don't seem to have support from your siblings — perhaps they know a lot more about him than you do. Sometimes one builds up fantasies of what one's long lost parent is like, and they may be greatly distorted.

I suppose the only thing you can do is speak to your mother about your feelings. She may be understanding and help you in your search, but I somehow doubt that she'll be co-operative in this venture of yours.

Dear Dr. Cotter: I have a problem appropriate for a minister to answer.

Lately I have been spending time with a girl at school. She is very nice and we share many common interests. But I am Jewish and she is Christian. She believes that those who do not accept Jesus Christ as their Savior go to Hell. We have had many discussions about this. She respects the fact that I am a Jew.

I don't want religion to come between us. Do you believe that Jews go to Hell: I cannot believe that anyone could believe that.

Answer: I am a believing Christian and I believe that "hell" is the condition of those who knowingly reject God, in whatever form they have been able to know God.

Young readers' questions on human relations and sex are answered by a panel including Marion Powell, physician; Graham Cotter, clergyman; Dr. Saul Levine, psychiatrist, and social worker Bruce Vichert.

Send questions to Youth Clinic, The Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria V8W 2N4. Readers wishing to talk with someone about their problems can call NEED at 386-6233.

by mike lamm

Dear Mike: Help! I'm having trouble with my 1978 Buick Century V-6. It idles too fast for too long a time. The owner's manual cautions against running a cold engine on fast idle for five minutes or more — that five minutes at fast idle could damage the engine and catalytic converter. However, it invariably takes almost five minutes to reduce the idle speed when this engine is cold. I feel all this idling wastes gasoline and might harm my car, not to mention the fact that other drivers are always waiting impatiently to get into the parking lot I'm trying to leave. What to do?

Fast Idle

Dear Fast: Your choke isn't releasing as quickly as it should. This can be caused by one or a combination of malfunctions. Have your mechanic check: (1) your choke hot-air modulator; (2) you EFE valve; (3) the hot-air door on your carburator air cleaner, and (4) the electric choke and its heat sensors.

Dear Mike: Our 1977 Ford ¾-ton pickup with the 400-c.i.d. V-8 overheats constantly. The temperature gauge pegs against the "H" after only a few miles of driving, even in cold weather. The radiator is heavy-duty. Fanbelts are tight and new. There are good hoses, a new 180-degree thermostat, new pressure cap, 5-bladed thermostatic fan, and the shroud is intact. Oddly, there's never a loss of coolant. What can the problem be?

Hot Truck

Dear Hot: Sounds like the cooling system is fine but that the gauge might be on the fritz. If you never lose coolant — and you don't mention chugging noises from the radiator after you shut off the engine — I'd say your temperature sending unit or dial is giving you wrong signals. Wire in an auxiliary sender and then a different gauge to check.

New faces in hospital

By JOHN GOUDAS

Fresh young faces dot the landscape on General Hospital. The old guard gives way to the new, however reluctantly. It may be hard to believe, but Ohio's tiny, blonde Shell Kepler, who plays Amy Vining on the show, claims she's been watching John Beradino's Dr. Steve Hardy and Emily McLaughlin's Jessie Brewer since she was three years old.

Newcomer Shell continues to watch on General Hospital for the most part, content to bide her time, learning by osmosis. She's in the right spot and she knows it. Raised in the Midwest, Shell made her stage debut at age nine in The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie at the Chattanooga, Tenn., Little Theater.

By the time she was ready for junior high school, the family moved to Los Angeles. Her mother died when Shell was 14, and her father moved East two years later, but Shell and her brother Fred, a classical guitarist, decided to remain in Los Angeles, close to the action.

A year later the enterprising youngster quit school to become a reporter for a rock 'n' roll music magazine, while her brother Fred began singing with various groups.

Not one to sit around, Shell began to try her hand at writing. In her spare time, she completed a screenplay and a television pilot with the author intending to play the leads of course. That's known as confidence.

SHELL KEPLER is a bright new face on General Hospital, playing Amy Vining.

The youngster also recognizes promising markets when she sees them — namely California real estate despite its sky-high level, and the stock market. The resourceful Ms. Kepler is bullish in both corners.

Naturally, it's best to humor pretty young things who talk like E.F. Hutton, but in Shell Kepler's case, don't walk away. It might pay to listen.

Plot Portents: David's opposition to Trish's musical jobs is about to backfire on Days of Our Lives. Self-seeking Neil and the sly Lee work in tandem to prevent Julie and Doug from re-uniting.

Encouraged by Jones, Leslie digs into her past on The Young and the Restless. The viperous Jill may have an admirer in Steve, a newcomer with poor judgment.

By making Tom an offer he couldn't refuse on As the World Turns, Chris also gave him an ultimatum that may not only affect his career, but also his future relationship with his entire family.

Delia perks up when a newcomer arrives at Ryan's Bar on Ryan's Hope. Jack gets closer to solving the mystery surrounding Mary's death and the guests at Kim's wedding hear more than just the ceremony.

Kelly and Linc sail into some cloudy weather on All My Children. Nina readies a surprise for Daisy at lunch and Hank devises a cure for Edna's troubled conscience.

Take two tablespoons full twice a day and follow the Naran plan.

If your first purchase does not show you the simple, easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't seem to disappear almost like magic from neck, chin, arms, bust, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow the easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloat disappears — how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.

No hope of early budget

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Allan MacEachen quashed any hope Thursday of an early budget or even a mini-budget to outline the new government's economic game plan this year.

However, MacEachen told reporters he plans a Commons speech in the next few days in which he will discuss the economy as part of the throne speech debate.

Opposition critics have been clamoring for a budget next month, but MacEachen ruled out one before the end of May, adding his first budget is probably "some months away."

John Crosbie, Progressive Conservative finance critic, challenged MacEachen Thursday — as author of the Conservative government's defeat in December — to become the author of a new Liberal budget.

MacEachen says a budget has to be delayed until a new oil price agreement between Ottawa and the producing provinces, due July 1.

Energy prices for 1980 are essential to the budget as they affect the amount of federal revenue and, in turn, the size of the deficit.

CMHC chief sees red ink if changes aren't made

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada Mortgage and Housing Corp. managed to stay out of the red last year, but its president says changes are needed to avoid ever-growing deficits.

Raymond V. Hession made the comment in the 1979 annual report of the federal housing agency, made public Thursday.

The report shows the corporation's net income fell to $5.2 million, down from $6.4 million in 1978 but it says income would have fallen even more without some one-time recoveries on land transactions and financial restraints.

Hession said the financial problems facing the corporation increased in 1979 and there is a need to re-examine its financial and legislative arrangements with the federal government.

The CMHC president could not be reached for further comment Thursday, but a senior official said what is needed is a new arrangement that draws the line between the activities of the corporation as a financial institution and the activities that are really the responsibility of government.

In that way, the government would have direct responsibility for certain types of housing programs operated by CMHC and presumably would subsidize the cost of those programs, he explained.

Such a system is already in effect at the Export Development Corp., another federal Crown agency.

The latest CMHC report generally confirms some of the financial problems revealed earlier this year in a confidential study prepared for the former Progressive Conservative government.

It says claims against the CMHC mortgage insurance fund rose to a record $499 million during 1979 and adds that total assets in the fund declined for the first time in its 25-year history.

The large number of claims due to mortgage defaults forced CMHC to borrow $60 million from the government and to dispose of some of its marketable securities at a loss. The fund also was hurt by provision for anticipated future losses on its real estate holdings of $176 million.

In general, the report reflects the continuing shift in the corporation's role away from direct loans for various types of housing projects to helping the private sector assume more responsibility for loans and housing construction.

EDC profit up $10.5M

OTTAWA (CP) — The Export Development Corp., which provides banking and insurance services to foreign buyers and domestic sellers, today reported profits of $42.2 million for the year ending Dec. 31, 1979, up $10.5 million from 1978.

In the Crown corporation's annual report, released today, company president Sylvain Cloutier said the reinvestment of these profits into the corporation and additional government capital investment of $85 million makes the company better able to provide competitive financing.

"In view of the potential growth of lending services and the fact that approximately $3.5 billion of EDC's present loan commitments are as yet undisbursed, there is a risk to the maintenance of our earnings record and to the preservation of our invested capital should, as is probable, the cost of funds continue to stay at their current high levels," Cloutier said.

Civil liberties group slams handling of RCMP crimes

OTTAWA (CP) — The government should compensate victims of illegal RCMP operations, the Canadian Civil Liberties Association said Thursday.

In addition, RCMP officers who broke the law and any public servants and cabinet ministers who covered up illegal operations should face criminal charges, Alan Borovoy, lawyer for the association told the McDonald commission investigating RCMP activities.

Policemen and cabinet ministers should be treated the same as other Canadians under the law, he said.

Canadians are beginning to think there are people who can break the law with impunity because not a single charge has been laid despite three years of revelations of RCMP lawbreaking, he said.

"With every passing week, month and year that these wrongdoers avoid the processes of justice, public cynicism about these matters can only be strengthened," the association said in a 100-page submission to the commission.

Chairman David McDonald, an Alberta Supreme Court judge, rejected the association's criticism of the commission for not recommending prosecution of Mounties who have admitted taking part in apparently illegal acts.

McDonald said the law requires the commission to give formal notice to anyone whom it plans to accuse of misconduct in its final report.

The commission is still hearing leagl arguments on the form such notices should take.

"We must obey the law," McDonald said, adding that the federal government and provincial attorneys-general are well aware of the evidence heard by the commission during the last 2½ years and they could have taken legal or disciplinary action on their own.

The association said Liberal cabinet ministers, including Prime Minister Trudeau, must share the blame for RCMP lawbreaking because they often displayed "outright contempt for the law."

Once details of RCMP activities became public, cabinet ministers sometimes used false logic to deny the officers' conduct was unlawful, the association said.

In other cases, "they invoked feeble rationalizations to excuse conduct which they admitted was unlawful."

The association proposed a charter to specify just what the RCMP can and cannot do in criminal and national security investigations.

The association also strongly recommended that police not be given the power to open mail, as planned by Solicitor-General Robert Kaplan.

Besides being a severe intrusion on personal privacy, mail-opening is unfair, the association said.

Axworthy champions Lib

PARIS (CP) — In his first major address on women's rights Lloyd Axworthy, Canadian minister responsible for the status of women, has called for help from provincial governments, employers and trade unions to develop an employment strategy that lifts females out of a second-class position in the work force.

In a speech Thursday to an international conference here, which was distributed in Ottawa, Axworthy said a significant number of Canadian women continue to receive lower wages, work in inferior conditions and enjoy fewer opportunities for advancement than men.

"Occupational segregation, on the basis of sex, has changed little over the past decade," Axworthy told the Organization of Economic Co-operation and Development high level conference on the employment of women.

Sixty-two per cent of Canada's female work force have sales, clerical and service jobs.

Axworthy outlined his vision of a comprehensive national employment strategy for women that would include measures to create jobs, improve income, pensions, job security and working conditions, recognize family responsibilities with better day care and improved parental leave benefits, provide training in non-traditional jobs, monitor hiring practices and help doubly disadvantaged handicapped, native and immigrant women.

"The effective implementation of such a strategy in Canada will place a considerable premium on co-operation between federal and provincial levels of government, employers and trade unons, to ensure that policies introduced at the federal level are complemented by appropriate measures elsewhere," he said.

Axworthy urged delegates from other countries to recognize two fundamental premises — that women have the right to an equal footing with men in the work force and that the potential of women in the labor force is not being fully used, especially in highly industrialized countries.

Ruff's show off air

OTTAWA (CP) — The host of the cancelled CBC television show, Ombudsman, said Thursday political pressure was probably responsible for the show being taken off the air.

Kathleen Ruff said she has not been given any reason officially for the cancellation, except that it had nothing to do with ratings. But she says she has been aware the program was unpopular with people in high places within the CBC and elsewhere.

Ombudsman had been on the air for seven years before being cancelled a few weeks ago.

Paproski undergoes surgery

OTTAWA (CP) — Former sport minister Steve Paproski is to undergo exploratory surgery today at the defence department medical centre, his office said Thursday.

Paproski entered hospital earlier in the week after complaining of not feeling well. His office said the problems may involve his gallbladder.

Paproski, 51, has represented Edmonton since 1968.

Management to blame, not clerks, says union

OTTAWA (CP) — Public service union leaders say the auditor-general's findings on unproductive government clerks is appalling, has left the impression they are lazy and could influence current conciliation toward a contract settlement for 50,000 clerical workers.

Bill Doherty and Aileen Manion, vice-presidents of the Public Service Alliance of Canada who are involved in the clerks' continuing contract negotiations, were reacting Thursday to the annual report of Auditor-General J.J. Macdonell who said spot testing of government clerks found they were working at only 60.8 per cent of potential.

Both union leaders said it was unfair to pick on the clerks and they questioned the method of measurinng their work habits. Both are concerned that while Macdonell did not blame the clerks — he blamed sloppy management and improper training — the public will chalk it up to laziness.

And they regard the findings as a setback in the current conciliation process aimed at getting a new collective agreement for the clerks which would shorten their work week, increase vacations and increase wages by 13 per cent in the first year and nine per cent in the second year with a cost-of-living allowance on top.

Treasury board has offered the clerks a five-per-cent increase each year, a proposal that led to a breakdown of mediation talks in March and a mass demonstration here two weeks ago. Another is planned in Montreal next week. Their wages range from about $8,000 to $14,000 annually.

Doherty termed Macdonell's findings appalling, ridiculous garbage and said the government, the public and Parliament must be convinced that it is management's fault if indeed the clerks are unproductive.

"A simple clerk has absolutely no control over work methods," Doherty said.

"They do what they're told, yet they seem to be condemned."

"Even though he's not blaming them, it does a disservice to the poor little clerks," Manion said.

He added: "The bottom line in our view is the auditor-general's report has really been an indictment of senior management."

"This bureaucracy is extremely top heavy while at the working levels — customs officers for example — they're working very hard just to keep up with the flow of traffic."

In addition, he said 70 per cent of the clerks are women — "It's a job ghetto."

Referendum 'deal' not in the cards

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said today any attempt by him to offer Quebec a new deal before the May 20 referendum on sovereignty-association would be perceived as a "deathbed repentance."

"I think it's too late for that," Trudeau said at his first news conference of the new Parliament.

However, he promised to continue to work for constitutional change after the referendum and would be willing to negotiate any proposal offered by Quebec politicians "as long as it deals with federalism."

Trudeau lamented that more was not done during the last 10 years to change the constitution so Quebecers would be more content within Confederation.

"But now is not the time to cry over spilled milk or mop it up."

Trudeau largely blamed Quebec Premier Rene Levesque for blocking constitutional change discussed at recent federal-provincial conferernces. The English-speaking provinces had shown more willingness to revamp federalism.

Every time Levesque came to Ottawa to negotiate changes, he "wanted to show federalism doesn't work" and rejected proposals.

Addressing the Commons Tuesday, Trudeau said that he will not negotiate sovereignty-association with Levesque even if the Parti Quebecois wins the referendum.

Levesque's plan for sovereignty-association is being countered in the referendum campaign by a package of constitutional proposals prepared by Quebec Liberal Leader Claude Ryan.

Ryan's proposals call for a greater decentralization of federal powers — something Trudeau has made a career of opposing.

Trudeau said he has not abandoned the idea of conducting a national referendum on possible constitutional changes. Such a referendum could help counter ambiguous results emanating from the May 20 vote in Quebec.

"It would be on something specific," Trudeau said. However, he was vague on what question could be posed.

Levesque, campaigning in Quebec City, said he and Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau agree that the referendum is not about Quebec independence, and added he hoped federalists would stop trying to label it as such.

Citing Trudeau's comments in Ottawa during debate on the throne speech, Levesque said the prime minister recognizes that a yes vote "is not and cannot be a yes to the independence of Quebec" because it cannot give Quebec "a mandate to discuss sovereignty pure and simple."

"We agree," Levesque said.

Child prostitutes back on street right away: police

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police said Thursday that child prostitutes they place in the care of the provincial human resources ministry often are back at work almost immediately.

The officers, who work the West End vice beat, painted a bleak picture in Family Court of a child-care system that is unable to keep juveniles off the streets.

The police are seeking to have B.C.'s superintendent of child welfare declared an unfit parent in the case of a 15-year-old prostitute, who they say, while a ward of the province, lived with a pimp who beat her.

The police say they hope the unusual action will provoke provincial authorities into either giving them authority to get the youngsters off the street, to provide adequate facilities to care for them or both.

They estimate the number of juvenile prostitutes working the West End at more than 40 and growing.

Police witnesses said Thursday, during the second day of a hearing to determine if the girl is in need of protection under the Protection of Children Act, that juveniles are subject to abuse by others in the Vancouver prostitution scene.

Constable Paul Bittante said few of the social service agencies are doing anything to help them.

"I don't think there is one that has done anything effectively," he told provincial court Judge Harry Boyle.

Boyle wondered if any juvenile prostitutes who had gone through the experience had come out all right.

"I can't think of one," said Constable Anne Beeftink, who for two years worked as liaison to child welfare officials. "I really can't."

She said the street life worked drastic changes on the juveniles she has known.

Cpl. Andy Nimmo testified he ordered a constable to apprehend the girl for her own welfare on March 7 because of his frustration in previous attempts to have the provincial human resources ministry deal with her.

He admitted that taking action against the superintendent of child welfare was unprecedented but "I felt something had to be done with her and I wasn't getting any satisfaction going the other route."

The Protection of Children Act permits social workers, police and probation officers to intervene to protect children who are not being cared for properly.

Normally such action is taken by social workers on behalf of the superintendent — B.C.'s chief child welfare officer.

However, a thick sheaf of about 50 ministry reports on the girl, introduced earlier in the hearing, showed that for almost a year she was repeatedly picked up in the West End and delivered to child welfare officials only to return to the street.

Constable Colin Harris said there have been recent rumblings of gang warfare among prostitutes and pimps and occasional violent incidents between factions.

"My concern is to control that kind of violence before somebody gets hurt," he said.

The officers said the fights are over territory and attempts by pimps to take over each others' prostitutes.

Bittante told the court that in a recent fight involving four prostitutes over a street corner, one woman almost lost an eye and was bitten on the arm.

He said the girl had told him of being beaten several times by her pimp.

Opera singers shed fat image

CALGARY (CP) — Opera singers no longer have the image of being "a bunch of big fat people standing up there shouting at each other," says a principal singer with the New York Metropolitan Opera Co.

The opera-going public expects to see realistic performances by reasonably attractive, reasonably thin people, Allan Monk, 37, said in an interview.

"Singers are very aware of their public image. The voice alone isn't good enough anymore."

Television is largely responsible for opera's altered image, said Monk, a baritone. He's in Calgary to perform in a Southern Alberta Opera Association production of La Boheme. He got his start in amateur musical theatre in Calgary.

"The public expects you to be perfect. It expects you to run the four-minute mile every time. But it's not like in sports— there's no such thing as winning or losing. You're expected to be great every time."

Monk said that everywhere he goes people ask: "How does an opera singer come from Calgary?

Monk received his early musical training in Calgary, studied music and drama at the Banff School of Fine Arts and auditioned for the San Francisco Opera at the age of 23.

Layoffs traced to stumpage

The large disparity in stumpage rates applied to small forestry firms in B.C. is partly to blame for recent layoffs in the industry, Bill King (NDP — Shuswap-Revelstoke) said Thursday.

King said one foreign company operating on Vancouver Island is paying stumpage rates that are in some cases half what small B.C.-owned companies are paying.

"There's discrimination in the forest industry today, discrimination propogated by this government against B.C. businessman on behalf of the monopolies that control the majority of the forest industry in this province," King said in the house.

"They're an integrated foreign corporation, they sell to an internal market," he said. "The poor, little struggling B.C. firms have to sell on the competitive world market."

Small operators have been asking Forests Minister Tom Waterland for stumpage relief for some time, he said, but due to his indecisiveness and his inability to make a decision many of them have closed down.

King said most of the larger forestry firms forced to lay off workers are being hurt by the foreign export market slump, but the provincial government could do a great deal to stabilize employment opportunity in the forest industry by bringing in a realistic stumpage appraisal system.

The Council of Forest Industries has predicted the number of woodworkers without jobs could soon reach more than 12,000 because of the high interest rates and the fact that U.S. housing starts have dropped considerably.

Gov't nurse pay inquiry begins

VANCOUVER (CP) — Industrial inquiry commissioner Justice Henry Hutcheon met Thursday with negotiators for 2,700 psychiatric and public health nurses in the first day of hearings aimed at resolving their contract dispute with the provincial government.

Hutcheon was to meet with government negotiators today.

Labor Minister Jack Heinrich named Hutcheon to the salary dispute Tuesday to make non-binding recommendations for settlement.

The nurses, who staged limited walkouts last week, have demanded a 39-per-cent salary increase over 27 months to maintain their position relative to registered nurses in B.C. hospitals.

The Government Employee Relations Bureau has offered them 26 per cent over three years.

Trickery on subsidy denied

Early in the new year, the provincial government announced its low-interest mortgage program.

To qualify, construction had to have started after Jan. 15.

Gabelmann claimed the company ripped out perfectly good footings poured last year in order to qualify for the 9¾ per cent mortgage money.

But Jim Hartshorne, president of the company, says the footings were bulldozed because they were substandard.

However Port Hardy building inspector Cornelius Martin had approved the footings as meeting all normal building standards.

With the old footings gone, it is difficult to prove who is right.

In the meantime, Gabelmann said, the company has received approval for a $1.6 million low-interest mortgage under the H.I.P. program.

Housing Minister Jim Chabot expects to bring a report on the situation to the legislature next Thursday.

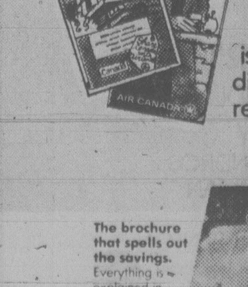
And right now, with your dollar going further here at home anyhow, there couldn't be a better time to discover again what a great country we live in.



The savings start with Charter Class Canada fares.*
Air Canada is offering great discounts on their regular fare for any trip of 640 kilometers or more. Seats are limited so book early. Of course, there are advance booking and payment restrictions but the savings are well worthwhile. Just ask any Travel Agent or call us for details.

Fly with us and save with our complimentary Cost-Cutter Coupons.
When you buy a C.C.C. ticket, you'll automatically receive our famous Cost-Cutter coupons which give you substantial discounts from Budget Rent a Car and 70 CN, Hilton and Holiday Inn hotels. VGH board backed on abortions

The Southern Vancouver Island Hospital Society has backed the actions of Victoria General Hospital's board on the question of whether abortions will be performed at the hospital.

A motion saying the society supports the majority of the hospital board members in their efforts to restore abortion services at VGH passed by a vote of 27 to 22.

The motion was brought by Jennifer Lowen, a new member of the hospital society and president of the Canadian Abortion Rights Action League.

Lowen said abortion services at the hospital were ended by two members of the therapeutic abortion committee and claimed the committee was operating under a different set of guidelines from all previous committees.

One society member commented: "Women are going to go to abortionists. Why in the world are they so self righteous in this hospital. Do they want them to go to butchers."

Another woman who said she is a nurse who has worked in several abortion clinics, opposed the motion.

"I'm here to say I've seen thousands of women come through those clinics with some awfully selfish reasons. I've had women say to me it would interfere with their trip to Hawaii," she told the meeting.

Asked if a majority of board members favor abortion, board chairman Alan Patterson said he couldn't answer since no precise poll had been taken.

Another member complained after the vote that only five of the 11 board members present — two in favor, three against — had voted.

But Syd Langhelt, one of those who abstained, said he had refrained from voting because he considered the question a comment on the board's actions.

Langhelt said because he is on the board, he did not want to influence the outcome.

On another controversial subject — whether an obstetric and pediatric facility should be located at the new Victoria General Hospital on Helmcken Road — the society came close to embarassing the board.

A motion which was defeated by a 24 to 23 vote called for the society to inform the health ministry it would prefer the obstetric and pediatric facility be left in Victoria.

"It would be unfortunate if this society endorsed this motion," said Patterson.

He said the plans for the obstetric and pediatric facility had been decided at the regional and provincial level of government.

He pointed out that it would be operated by the society.

Layoff job training

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Firestone Tire Rubber Co. says 8,500 workers destined for layoffs from their jobs in Ohio, Pennsylvania and California will receive training — at company expense — on how to hunt for new employment.

Vic General week eyed

Members of the Southern Vancouver Island Hospital Society voted Thursday to hold a Victoria General Hospital Week.

Dr. Eugene Kaellis, a member of the hospital board, proposed that the society sponsor the week to make the public aware of what the hospital does, how it operates and to help recruit new society members.

"We've observed people joining the society to promote specific issues or to elect a certain candidate to the board," he said.

But, he said, the best society members are those whose sole purpose is promoting the general operation of the hospital.

Kaellis referred to the situation which has occurred at Vancouver General Hospital in the last few years.

Its society was taken over by pro- and anti-abortion factions in 1978 which eventually resulted in the take over of the hospital board by the provincial government.

"If you trace the series of events there you'll see that it started with a tremendous polarization of the society," he said.

Graffiti paint issue blame unfair: CUPE

A spokesman for the Canadiam Union of Public Employees said today it's unfair to blame union members for refusing to allow young graffiti writers to paint over their work at the McKenzie Elementary School.

Bob Cunningham, president of Local 382 Canadian Union of Public Employees, said nobody asked the union to co-operate in a paint-up project scheduled for Saturday involving a dozen or more school children who admitted writing on the walls.

But, he admitted, if the incident had rached that stage, the union would have refused anyway.

The matter is covered by CUPE's contract with the school board.

"It could get ridiculous if children were allowed to replace broken windows, paint walls or replace washroom doors torn from hinges," Cunningham said.

He said there is a recognized procedure for attending to vandalism, including repairs by maintenance staff, calculating the cost and billing the parents of children where responsibility is determined.

In the McKenzie case, parent Jim Turnbull said his two daughters and others owned up to scrawling on the walls with grease pencil and felt-tipped pens.

The youngsters agreed to recitify the damage at a painting bee. Turnbull said he bought five gallons of stucco paint after being assured the union would not object.

But he said the union renaged and a custodian painted the walls Thursday.

Cunningham claimed no one representing CUPE had been consulted and said the decision to paint the wall was made by the school board administration.

Cunningham said the McKenzie custodian was told by his supervisor, Jack Griffiths, to paint the walls.

Griffiths today referred inquiries to school plant manager Keith Hawkins.

Hawkins said the matter is an internal one and refused comment.

ICBC benefits threat unknown to minister

Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt, the man responsible for the Insurance Corporation of B.C., says he knows nothing about claims by the Trial Lawyers Association of B.C. that the right of accident victims to try for remuneration through the courts may soon be threatened by ICBC.

"We are informed that there are proposals being discussed in Victoria which will lead to the institution of scheduled benefits for persons injured in car accidents just like those types of benefits that are now given in Workers' Compensation Board matters," said Robert Mackay, head of the newly-formed group.

"I don't know anything about it," Hewitt said when questioned by reporters.

Art Vertlieb, association vice-president, said the WCB system of established claim rates has been unsuccessful, and would be ever worse if adopted by ICBC.

"There's not a member of the legislature who doesn't have a complaint on his desk about worker's compensation," he said.

"There's no remedy, no court redress and the same thing would happen with ICBC."

Mackay said ICBC is becoming so large that the injured party in an automobile accident is threatened with diminished civil rights.

BBB warns against latest jewel scam

The Better Business Bureau warned today persons should be wary of an advertising campaign by an Toronto firm offering genuine one-carat emeralds for only seven dollars.

Denny Ryan, manager of the BBB in Victoria says if the person thinks he'll be getting a valuable jewel he'll be sadly mistaken.

The so-called emeralds have no greater value than an attractive pebble.

$25,000 fire loss

Careless dumping of an ashtray has been blamed for a fire Thursday in a home at 1245 McKenzie Street.

Victoria deputy fire chief Mike Heppell said the fire caused about $25,000 damage and said the heavy loss was due in part to a delay by the occupants in contacting the fire department.

The fire started in a garbage can in a basement bedroom.

Heppell said an unidentified man apparently dumped an ashtray into the can minutes before the fire was spotted about 7:15 a.m.

The man tried to put out the blaze but was unsuccessful and ran upstairs to get help from owners John and Mary Black.

Mrs. Black grabbed a fire extinguished but when she opened the basement door, she was driven back by the flames.

The fire department was finally called at 7:25 a.m. and when firemen reached the scene the basement was engulfed.

Teachers can view files but data to be purged first

B.C. teachers will be allowed to view files kept on them by the education ministry to ensure they do not contain confidential personal material, such as credit information and anonymous letters, Education Minister Brian Smith said Thursday.

Smith said, however, that any information which should not be in the files will be removed and destroyed first.

The minister said he does not want to get into situations where such material is given to teachers to take action against some third party who wrote something many years ago.

"What we want to ensure is that the material isn't being kept and used in any way against the teacher and I certainly will give that assurance," he said in the house.

A Nanaimo school trustee said last week that potentially damaging information was being kept in teachers' files.

Smith, in response to questions in the house by Gary Lauk (NDP — Vancouver Centre) said he personally pulled about 10 teachers' files at random Thursday and found no disparaging information of any kind.

"But of course that doesn't mean to say that there aren't files there that contains it," he said.

"So I'm aware of the teachers' concern and we will implement very strict guidelines to ensure that this kind of material that they are complaining about is removed from files."

The B.C. Teachers Federation said it is concerned that damaging information may be kept in the files and will travel to Victoria on Monday to meet Smith and demand to see their files.

Smith, who said Tuesday he won't be at the legislature that day because the current session will be recessed for three days, said teachers are welcome to inspect their files as long as they don't arrive 1,000 en masse a day.

In Vancouver, BCTF president Al Blakey congratulated Smith on his decision but said he and a small group of teachers will go ahead with the planned visit to Victoria as a symbolic confirmation of the new arrangement.

Stupich brands mortgage idea shelter for rich

A proposal to lower mortgage interest payment by using money from Canadian's savings accounts would only become a tax shelter for the rich, Dave Stupich (NDP — Nanaimo) said Thursday.

The scheme, proposed by Intergovernmental Affairs Minister Garde Gardom — which he hopes to air at the Western premier's conference in Lethbridge, Alta., next week — would allow people to invest savings in residential mortgages, with the return on investment tax-free.

As an example, Gardom said an individual would lend $25,000 for a mortgage with the federal government pegging the interest rate at something less than the going rate to give the homeowner a break on the interest payment. The lender would benefit from not having to pay interest on the return.

Gardom said there is ample money available in Canadians' savings accounts that could be used for mortgage lending.

"Unfortunately Garde travels in a limited circle where people might find this very interesting, people who are in a 50-per-cent or more income tax bracket," Stupich said.

"He just hasn't had any association or doesn't know the problems of people who are in lower income tax brackets. And this is going to do nothing to help them, it's simply going to help the ones who are extremely well off already and make them better off."

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

2 oldtimers still beautiful

Lupins and Columbines (Aquilegia) are sometimes listed as perennial flowers and sometimes found in lists of biennials. I suppose this is because neither is a long-lived perennial in heavy soils, nor in climates which commonly reach low frosty temperatures in winter.

Columbines are dainty in flower and foliage, and attractive to hummingbirds who visit the open throated flowers for the nectar in May. In a semishaded spot of the garden the plants grow well, each making a fine clump.

Colors may be pink, blue, white, yellow, mauve or rose. As usual with perennials, the old flower stems should be promptly cut off to prevent seed formation.

In some years a few more flowers may be expected as the weather cools in September, particularly if the plants are kept healthy with sufficient watering in summer. The moisture also maintains the attractive foliage which is grey-green and somewhat fern-like.

Lupins might be considered as companion plants to the Aquilegias. Their colors are in the same range. Lupins are in shades of pink, deep rose, purple, yellow and white. Most have the blending of cream in the individual florets which results in a delightful effect.

Stately is a word often used in describing Lupins, for they are indeed symetrical in form as the compact stems of flowers rise to 90 or even 120 cms in height. Closely packed on sturdy stems, they are like colorful candles when seen against dark green shrubs as a background.

Give Lupins a place out of strong summer winds, where they get morning sun but shade from hot sun in afternoons perhaps by tall trees. They do like air circulation, not only to be shaded by a solid wall or fence. The best planting I have seen was in an open circular bed with tall forest trees giving dappled shade from the west and northwest.

Lupins and Columbines may be found for sale in April at some nurseries and garden centres. They will bloom this same season, late April through into June. According to your soil and garden location you may or may not have them live successfully over winter to bloom again.

To ensure having a good showing of these two fine garden plants a sowing of freshly purchased seeds can be made by the end of April, oudoors in a partly shaded spot.

Mark off the small area so that it will not be distubed during summer growth. Hand weeding will be needed, but if sowing of seeds is done at about one to two or three cms, there will be no thinning or pricking out until the little plants are lifted in perhaps mid July.

Then they should be set into a vacant row in the vegetable garden with the soil well worked, about 30cms apart to encourage strong rooting and growth.

By September 6, or Labor Day weekend, both Lupins and Columbines go into the flower border spaces where they are to bloom next spring and early summer.

If you have been without these two flowers in your garden, try to see a picture of them in a seed catalogue or plant book. They are both really oldtimers though greatly improved over the years through selection by plantsmen until today's strains are truly plants of beauty.

They are not merely huge but of good form and colors, still with more than a touch of old fashioned elegance.

Z-day crowd stones Rhodes statue

Times News Services

SALISBURY — Rhodesia became independent Zimbabwe today in celebrations marred by three grenade explosions; one that killed two persons and injured about 30 others, and a jailbreak by about 60 prisoners from Salisbury's central prison.

The worst incident involved the tossing of a hand grenade into a crowd of about 150 blacks singing outside a Methodist church in the black township of Mufakose, 10 kilometres west of Salisbury.

Police said the prisoners awaiting trial overpowered their guards, broke open a gate and marched out of the city's prison. All but nine returned when confronted by armed prison guards.

The prisoners, some of them considered highly dangerous, broke out shortly after the arrival of independence at midnight Thursday night.

Groups of blacks stoned the bronze, life-sized statute of Cecil Rhodes, founder of the British colony of Rhodesia, and threw rocks at the home of a former government minister.

The official celebration went off smoothly, marked by dancing African tribeswomen, British pomp and a plea for reconciliation.

Prime Minister Robert Mugabe, who led the largest black guerrilla faction in seven years of bloody civil war for majority rule, broadcast an appeal for unity to the white minority, saying: "If yesterday I fought you as an enemy, today you have become a friend and ally with the same national interest, loyalty, rights and duties as myself. If yesterday you hated me, today you cannot avoid the love that binds me to you."

At midnight, a British army sergeant lowered the Union Jack on Britain's last African colony. A wild cheer erupted from the 40,000 spectators, mostly black, crowded into Rufaro soccer stadium.

Replacing the British flag, a former guerrilla raised Zimbabwe's five-color banner — black for the nation's six million blacks, white for the 250,000 whites, green for the earth, yellow for minerals and red for the 20,000 who died in the civil war.

UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim, attending the ceremonies, sent Mugabe a letter anticipating that Zimbabwe will join the world organization and offering UN assistance to overcome the ravages of the civil war.

Other foreign dignitaries included four presidents, seven prime ministers and envoys from almost 100 countries. Representing Canada was a delegation headed by External Affairs Minister Mark MacGuigan and T. C. Bacon, Canada's high commissioner in Lusaka.

Absent from the ceremonies was former prime minister Ian Smith, the leader of the whites who defied Britain in 1965 and declared Rhodesia independent to block British plans for eventual black rule. He was on a speaking tour in neighboring South Africa, the only African state remaining under the rule of a white minority.

The United States today became the first country to open an embassy in Zimbabwe and granted the new state $2 million to rebuild rural clinics destroyed in seven years of guerrilla war.

In March 1970 the United States closed its mission — a consulate — to join an international campaign to isolate Smith's white minority regime.

Afghani toll put at 300,000

Times News Services

LONDON — More than 300,000 Afghans have died in Afghanistan in two years of fighting between Soviet-backed government forces and Moslem rebels and 10,000 Soviet soldiers have died since Moscow's military intervention last December, a spokesman for some of the insurgents said Thursday.

Burnhaniddin Rabani of the Islamic Alliance for the Liberation of Afghanistan said, "The Russians have destroyed hundreds of cities and villages, using napalm and chemical gases. They have killed women and blown children to pieces with bombs.

"And yet the world watches as if this was another Olympic game being played by Moscow."

Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi — in Salisbury for Zimbabwe independence celebrations — today withdrew her country's historic objections to U.S. military aid to Pakistan in unprecedented face-to-face talks with Pakistani President Mohammad Zia ul-Haq.

She also indicated that the regional crisis over the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan could bring India and Pakistan closer together.

Meanwhile, a Moscow newspaper today urged its readers to send postcards to U.S. President Carter telling him he "is pushing our planet to the abyss of conflicts and wars."

Readers were asked to paste the newspaper cutout to a real post card, add 27 kopecks (about 50 cents Cdn.) postage, and drop it in a mailbox.

Salute to flag ends in horror

PAGO PAGO, American Samoa (UPI) — While 7,000 dignitaries and guests watched in horror from a parade area, a U.S. Navy plane taking part in American Samoa's Flag Day celebration crashed into the island's largest luxury hotel, killing seven crew members.

One person was missing and one guest at the 200-room Rainmaker Hotel was in serious condition today with burns suffered in Thursday's crash. Five employees of the hotel suffered minor injuries.

The turbo-prop aircraft, a P-3 Orion from Moffett Naval Air Station in Mountain View, Calif., had completed its second run of dropping skydivers near the reviewing area, jammed with an estimated 7,000 spectators, when it clipped a mile-long tramway line running across Pago Pago Harbor to the 1,800-foot Mount Alava.

After the plane sheared off three of the four support cables, it lost its right wing and tail section and cartwheeled into an area in front of the two-story Rainmaker Hotel and the governor's mansion on a nearby hillside.

The impact carried the burning plane into the hotel where it exploded. A 99-room wing was destroyed by flames.

Lebanese take seven hostages

BEIRUT (AP) — A group of young Lebanese Christian militiamen seized five United Nations personnel and two U.S. newsmen after opening fire on UN troops today in southern Lebanon near the Israeli border, a UN spokesman said.

The newsmen and three of the UN personnel were later released.

One UN soldier was reported to have been wounded.

UN spokesman Samir Sanbar said reporter Steve Hindy, 31, and photographer Zaven Vartan, 42, both employed by The Associated Press news agency, were taken into custody with the three Irish UN soldiers and two UN observers — an American and a Frenchman.

The incident occurred south of the provincial capital of Bint Jbeil, about three kilometres north of the Israeli border.

The UN spokesman said efforts are being made to bring about the release of the other hostages.

In Tel Aviv, a Israeli army spokesman said he had no information about the incident.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Air Force has announced it will establish a squadron next year to train pilots on the new TR-1 spy plane, an outgrowth of the U-2 aircraft.

LONDON (CP) — For the latest in nuclear age fashion, consider a trip to Britain.

A British firm is marketing nuclear survival kits featuring stylish suits in sunshine yellow and H-bomb blue.

You can order your suit via mail-order catalogue, with each suit costing the Canadian equivalent of between $350 and $500. The garment comes packed in its own protective metal carrying case.

The cheapest of the four kits now offered by the Lincolnshire-based firm Civil Defence Supply contains a decontaminable one-piece outer suit, a two-piece inner suit made of charcoal impregnated cloth, a pair of Wellington boots, gloves made of chemically resistant natural rubber, a respirator, two spare filter canisters, a mask demisting kit and a can of decontamination powder.

"We've had hundreds of inquiries," says firm director Eran Bauer.

"It seems everyone wants a nuclear suit these days; the market is probably worth millions in Britain."

He says the suits won't give total protection against nuclear radiation, only against the chemical and biological effects in an attack. They are designed to be worn for limited periods only, for leaving an attack zone or for moving around outside the safety of a shelter.

"But they're as protective as the suits issued to the military around the world."

Some emergency officials are worried that Britons may not understand the limitations of such kits.

"Nothing short of a large thickness of dense material like concrete or steel will prot'ct you from gamma radiation," said one local official.

Israelis raid PLO base

Times News Services

TEL AVIV — Seaborne Israeli forces raided a Palestinian base on Lebanon's southern coast early today and killed six Palestinians, the military command announced. Palestinian sources put the death toll at 18, including three children.

The attack, first of its kind in eight months, was in retaliation for the Palestinian raid April 7 on the Misgav Am border kibbutz in which the five raiders and three Israelis were killed.

The Israelis moved at dark, apparently surprising the Palestinians at Ras El-Sheikh, a base 20 kilometres north of the Lebanese port of Tyre and about 40 km north of the Israeli border.

Two Israeli soldiers were wounded, the communique said, and the raiders blew up two buildings before pulling out. Ras El-Sheikh, near the town of Sarafand, is reported to serve as a base for three groups in the Palestine Liberation Organization, including PLO leader Yasser Arafat's Al Fatah faction.

The retaliatory raid apparently was delayed until Prime Minister Menachem Begin completed three days of talks with President Carter on the deadlocked Egyptian-Israeli negotiations to work out an autonomy plan for the 1.2 million Palestinian Arabs living on the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip, occupied by Israel in the 1967 Arab-Israeli War.

Begin returned home today. He, Carter and President Anwar Sadat of Egypt agreed to step up the frequency of the negotiations, but there was little or no expectation that they will reach agreement by May 26, the target date set by the Camp David accords.

Begin returned to a domestic political crisis caused by Defence Minister Ezer Weizman's call during his absence for early elections "to reach a new public and ideological framework and to pull the country out of a certain quagmire into which it has sunk."

Weizman's challenge to Begin's leadership brought demands from several other cabinet members for his resignation. The defence minister on Wednesday hinted he would accept a post in any government formed by the Labor party, which Begin's Likud coalition defeated in 1976. The Likud has been losing ground recently.

Israeli Opposition leader Shimon Peres has been invited to the White House, April 24.

Carter, Reagan win

The Associated Press

President Carter and Ronald Reagan scored more victories in party skirmishes in the western United States.

Carter came out on top Thursday in the Idaho Democratic caucuses, and Reagan won at North Dakota's state Republican convention. That added to their large delegate leads over party rivals.

But Reagan's chief rival, George Bush, also picked up some delegates in Arkansas.

And John Anderson's supporters got the go-ahead to put him on the ballot in Massachusetts as an independent, with the Illinois congressman clearly leaning toward making a run as an independent presidential candidate.

In Idaho's district caucuses, Carter gained 49 per cent of the vote to Kennedy's 29, with 22 per cent uncommitted.

Reagan picked up 12 delegates at the North Dakota state Republican convention, with one going to Bush and four uncommitted.

At the same time, Bush gained the support of six Arkansas delegates to the Republican national convention who previously had been uncommitted or pledged to candidates no longer in the race.

Another Republican hopeful, Representative Philip Crane of Illinois, dropped out of the race Thursday, which will likely benefit fellow conservative Reagan. Crane said he will campaign for Reagan.

IMF votes China in WASHINGTON (AP) — China was voted into the International Monetary Fund Thursday, a move that opens the potential for considerable financial aid to the Communist country.

While there was no announcement on the future membership of Nationalist Chinese-ruled Taiwan, which had been occupying the Chinese seat in the 140-country institution.

U.S. officials said last week they were trying find a way to create a special membership, or affiliation, for Taiwan.

Rail deal ties B.C. to South

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Interstate Commerce Commission on Thursday approved merger of the Burlington Northern and St. Louis-San Francisco railways into the longest railway in the U.S. history.

The combined carriers will operate about 48,000 kilometres of track in 25 states as well as B.C. and Manitoba. Service will span the continent from the Pacific Northwest to the Gulf of Mexico.

The commission said the new corporation — which will carry the name Burlington Northern, Inc. — will have more than $3.75 billion in assets and is expected to earn more than $112 million in annual net income.

Once the merger is completed, the new railway will offer shippers direct service for the first time over a single rail system from Vancouver, to Birmingham and Mobile, Ala., and from Winnipeg to Houston, Tex.

Legislators charged

SEATTLE (AP) — A grand jury indicted two Washington state legislative leaders and a lobbyist Thursday for allegedly conspiring to legalize gambling in the state in return for a share of the profits.

The 29-count indictment named former Democratic House speaker John Bagnariol, state Senate Majority Leader Gordon Walgren and lobbyist Patrick Gallagher.

The charges were similar to allegations in a federal complaint filed two weeks ago outlining an FBI "sting" operation, in which the three allegedly made deals with undercover FBI agents.

PM eyes alliance with NDP

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said today he supports the idea of a parliamentary alliance with the New Democratic Party to provide his Liberal government with representation in Western Canada.

He confirmed at a press conference that approaches proposing a form of coalition have been made to the NDP, which has 27 members from the four Western provinces. The Liberals hold only two seats west of Ontario, both in Manitoba.

While the NDP has spurned the approaches and some Liberals oppose an alliance, Trudeau said, "it is not an idea that has horrified me."

Trudeau said a Liberal-NDP alliance appeals to him "particularly in circumstances where the NDP is very strong in some parts of Canada and we are very strong in others and at a time when national unity does call for the support of people of all parts of the country for the government of the day."

"I think it would be an acceptable idea to have some form of a working alliance."

Trudeau gave no details of when and by whom approaches were made to the NDP, nor whether the proposed alliance would have included bringing NDP MPs into his cabinet.

He observed that when his government held a minority of Commons seats between 1972 and 1974, there were shifting alliances on parliamentary votes with the NDP and the Conservatives because "we knew that the people didn't want a quick election.

"Perhaps the Tories' failure in the last Parliament is that they didn't realize that."

Trudeau also said today it is important for nonaligned countries as well as Western governments to protest the Soviet Union invasion of Afghanistan by boycotting the Moscow Olympics.

A boycott likely won't get the Soviet troops out of Afghanistan, but the Soviet Union must "be made to remember by whatever action we take that it loses a lot of friends, not only amongst Western countries."

Trudeau said he couldn't promise a decision before the visit Wednesday of American State Secretary Cyrus Vance but he hoped to decide before next weekend's annual meeting of the Canadian Olympic Association.

Trudeau also said today he has warned Liberal MPs and cabinet ministers that although he plans to quit before the next election, he doesn't want them campaigning for the leadership before he announces his retirement date.

"If anybody jumped the gun I certainly would look with displeasure on that", he said.

"Which really means that though I can't designate my successor as head of the Liberal party, I can sure make it difficult for anybody to succeed me if he tries to push me out too soon."

Yarrows workmen are wearing protective masks and other measures — including installation of a system to clean the air — have been taken to avoid an asbestos hazard during the refit of the Queen of Prince Rupert.

The Rupert is in drydock at Yarrows, undergoing a refit to prepare for service on the Victoria-Seattle run.

Esquimalt Port Renfrew NDP MLA Frank Mitchell claimed Thursday dust and flakes from asbestos sprayed on the metal of the ship's interior years ago to stop condensation were being shaken down, creating a health hazard for the workers.

When cabin ceilings were ripped out during renovations, the particles entered the air.

"The whole area was literally a fog of white. No one was aware of the danger. To clear the air, someone turned on the internal air conditioning system in the ship and the asbestos spread through the whole system."

In addition, a vaccuum system has been installed to suck out and change the air.

Asbestos dust can cause serious lung disorders and skin irritation.

Mitchell said the air conditioning system must be thoroughly cleaned out and the circulating air tested to make sure it is clear of asbestos contamination, before the Rupert starts carrying passengers again.

Meanwhile, the chairman of a provincial committee looking into the use of asbestos in B.C. school construction has announced it will look into work practices relating to handling of asbestos.

In addition, the committee will also examine commercial and public buildings built or renovated in the Vancouver area between 1950 and 1973.

The scope of the inquiry was announced Thursday by Jim Edgett, chairman of the six-member committee.

The committee, which represents the WCB as well as the ministries of health, education and labor, was formed after concern was expressed about the health hazard present in public buildings where asbestos had been used.

Edgett, executive director of the labor relations and standards branch, said the committee's purpose is to find out the extent of asbestos use in schools and public buildings and whether or not there is any health hazard.

Initially the committee will study schools in the following school districts: Vernon, Shuswap, Vancouver, Prince Rupert, Nanaimo and Maple Ridge.

The decision to look at commercial and public buildings was made at a committee meeting earlier this week.

The reason only those buildings built or renovated between the years 1950 and 1973 are to be studied is that after that time the use of asbestos in construction was stopped, Edgett said.

Because of the complicated nature of the study and the difficulty in getting information, the investigation is going to be a lengthy one, he added.

$4M gem heist in Tel Aviv

TEL AVIV (AP) — In the biggest robbery in Israel's history, a daring bandit invaded the Tel Aviv headquarters of the Jewish state's diamond industry today and took gems valued at up to $4.5 million, police said.

Shortly after the unidentified bandit fled the 13th-floor office of diamond merchant Menachem Hershkovitz, police sealed off the two-building exchange and began searching the employees one by one.

Police said they are not sure whether the robber, armed with a pistol and a hand grenade, succeeded in escaping the exchange before it was sealed off.

Many of the 3,000 employees in the exchange were delayed in returning home for the Jewish sabbath by the exhaustive search.

Exchange president Moshe Schnitzer refused to place a value on the stolen gems, but police provided an estimate.

Millions of dollars in transactions take place daily in the giant exchange and officials pride themselves on the strictest security precautions obtainable. Schnitzer said the robbery was the first at the exchange since it was built in 1968.

There were no injuries reported.

Wine, beer sales may go private

The provincial government is considering setting up specialty wine stores as a first step to private enterprise wine and beer sales, Consumer Affairs Minister Jim Nielsen said today.

Nielsen said it is inevitable some of the beer and wine distribution now handled by provincial liquor stores will be given to other merchants and that radio and television liquor advertising — now prohibited in B.C. — will be allowed.

However, he refused to say when new regulations might be introduced.

"It could be much quicker than some people anticipate — it could be longer than some people desire," he said.

Nielsen said his ministry is considering several alternatives to the present distribution of wine but individual specialty stores likely will come before wine and beer in grocery stores.

"We'll be opening up a liquor store in Vancouver in August which will have the best selection of wines of any store across the country," he said.

"The natural evolution would be to set up individual specialty shops but you have to be sure first that you're not going to have some little store where a guy is selling two-bit wines."

Nielsen said B.C. wines would always have a prominent place in wines stores but a wide selection of wines would be featured.

He said that while his officials are studying various possibilities for getting wine and beer out of liquor stores, there is no great pressure at the moment (from consumers) to bring this about.

On another matter, Nielsen said liquor advertising on radio and television — long advocated by private broadcasters in B.C. — will eventually occur.

There has been a strong change in attitude, he said, noting that approval recently was given to allow beer to be sold at sporting events in Vancouver.

Nielsen rejected suggestions that advertising of alcohol leads to abuse.

GNP signals recession start

WASHINGTON (AP) — Growth of the U.S. economy slowed sharply in the first three months of 1980, apparently setting the stage for the beginning of a new recession, federal government figures showed today.

The commerce department report said the gross national product grew at an annual rate of 1.1 per cent from January through March, down from a two-per-cent rate of growth in the fourth quarter of 1979.

It also said there was a worsening of inflation to an annual rate of 11.4 per cent in the first quarter of 1980, up from a 9.4-per-cent rate in the fourth. This inflation measurement is different than the consumer price index, which has shown an 18-per-cent rate of increase.

The first-quarter GNP report provided support for recent predictions that a recession may have started in late March or early April.

President Carter said at a news conference Thursday that a recession has probably started, although he predicted it would be short and mild.

The GNP measures the total output of goods and services in the economy and a decline in output for two consecutive quarters is considered a recession. If the recession has started, it wouldn't show up in the GNP statistics until the second-quarter report, which will be issued in July.

The economy expanded during all of 1979 by an average of one per cent, but the Carter administration is predicting a decline of 0.4 per cent this year because of the recession.

Meanwhile, a decline in prime lending rates continued today as Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. of New York, the fifth-largest U.S. bank, cut the rate to 19½ per cent from 20 per cent.

But New York's Citibank, the second-largest bank, cut its rate only to 19¾ per cent.

Two days ago, Chase Manhattan Bank, the third-largest bank, cut its rate to 19¾ per cent. Chase today matched the cut to 19½ per cent as did No. 6 Chemical Bank.

The administration predicts unemployment will rise to 7.2 per cent from the current 6.2 per cent.

What? No overtime?

That's $238,095.23 a day.

The terms of Reynolds contract to appear in Cannonball, announced Thursday, put him ahead of the previous record salary — Marlon Brando's $3.7 million against 11.3 percent of the gross for 15 days work in Superman in 1978.

REYNOLDS
. . . the new king

Producer Al Ruddy said Golden Harvest Productions, bankrolled by Hong Kong film magnate Raymond Chow, will pay Reynolds the $5 million plus his "usual percentage," which a spokesman for Reynolds identified as 10 per cent of the gross.

"When you get past paying for an actor and into paying for a star, it's an area that's difficult to define," Ruddy said.

"Why $5 million?"

"That's what it took."

Davis swipes at 'brute force' tunnel link

Socred backbencher Jack Davis has criticized a proposal for a tunnel-cum-bridge link between Vancouver Island and the mainland.

The answer to the increase in auto and passenger traffic is more ferries and not a fixed link, says Davis, the MLA for North Vancouver-Seymour.

Davis, in letters sent to the Times and other newspapers, took a hefty swipe at the government's current fascination with tunnels, bridges and floating highways across the Georgia Strait.

"If a short ferry link were added between Vancouver airport and Gabriola Island near Nanaimo we could get to the year 2000 with the same number of ferries we have now," Davis argued.

Davis was responsible for the ferry system when he served as transport minister in the Socred government.

In his letter he said the answer is to add the extra crossing and replace 10 existing ferries with 10 new Cowichan-class jumbo vessels.

"Then we can carry four times as many people and cars as we do now. And we can save the equivalent of one year's provincial taxes in the process."

Davis estimates the cost at $500 million compared to the $3-$5 billion needed for a tunnel-bridge link proposed by former Socred cabinet minister Sam Bawlf and supported by Science Minister Pat McGeer.

"Ferries have it hands down over brute force alternatives like bridges and tunnels," Davis maintained.

McGeer's tunnel talk, however, has found a more responsive audience in the 2,100-member B.C. Construction Association.

President Frank Reder called Thursday for an early start on a feasibility study on the fixed link idea.

It is the only way British Columbians can make a sensible decision, he said.

The cabinet has not yet decided whether it will approve McGeer's request for such a study, estimated to cost between $500,000 and $1 million.

Meanwhile, McGeer Thursday received yet another fixed link proposal to add to his collection, this one from the Dutch firm of Dywidag Canada Ltd.

It calls for a floating tunnel link from the mainland to Gabriola Island, which would be linked to Vancouver Island by a series of short tunnels and bridges.

With an estimated cost of $1.6 billion, it is the cheapest proposal so far.

Sanction support grows but Iran remains defiant

Times News Services

Defiant Iranian leaders, including the Ayatollah Khomeini, declared today their country can resist mounting U.S. economic pressure.

But the sanctions campaign picked up steam among U.S. allies. Portugal Thursday declared sanctions against Iran, and today Australia and Denmark indicated they were ready to close ranks with U.S. President Carter in hopes of obtaining release of 50 U.S.embassy hostages in Tehran.

Khomeini said Iran is not afraid of an economic blockade and called on "men and women, young and old" to be ready to wage a guerrilla war to defend their country.

Iran's revolutionary leader made his scoffing remarks in a speech Thursday that preceded but anticipated new anti-Iran moves by Carter. The U.S. president announced a ban on imports from Iran and travel there by Americans and warned that the only next step for the U.S. "would be some sort of military action."

Khomeini said "Carter's main concern is to be president for another four years in order to commit crimes for another four years.

"It will be disgraceful for Europe to be subservient to Carter in order to gain votes for him."

In his latest series of moves, Carter banned U.S. imports from Iran, ordered the freeing for U.S. use or sale of impounded military equipment purchased by Iran, said he will seek congressional authority to pay reparations to the hostages and their families out of more than $8 billion in Iranian assets he froze in November, barred financial transactions with anyone in Iran, except those involved in journalism, and prohibited U.S. citizens other than journalists from travelling to Iran without U.S. government permission.

Carter also told a news conference in Washington he is considering banning shipments of U.S. food and medicine to Iran and blocking its use of Intelsat, the international communications satellite.

After government meetings today in Copenhagen, Danish Prime Minister Anker Joergensen announced his government is "ready to do everything to support U.S. efforts." He indicated Denmark would not order trade restrictions without first co-ordinating actions with its eight Common Market partners next week.

And in Canberra, officials said the Australian government would probably decide Monday to order at least partial bans on machinery, iron and steel exports to Iran.

The Portuguese government, which imported 21 per cent of its oil from Iran, said the embargo will remain in effect "until the release of the hostages."

Meanwhile, West Germany advised its nationals in Iran to send their families home amid indications the Bonn government would back the U.S. sanctions against Iran even if other nations in the Common Market do not.

Japan has said it will align its policies with those of the EEC, but it has not said what it would do if the European nations cannot reach an agreement.

MITCHELL
. . . dividends to U.S.

The NDP announced today it will go before the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission to oppose B.C. Tel's application for an interim rate increase.

"We regret the necessity of this intervention," said NDP communications critic Frank Mitchell (Esquimalt-Port Renfrew).

"Because the government has failed to intervene, the NDP opposition has no choice if British Columbian interests are to be looked after."

The party's brief to the CRTC disputes B.C. Tel's financial arguments and accuses the company of sloppy corporate planning as well as providing substandard service.

"B.C. Tel wants this increase so it can pay higher dividends on its shares and attact buyers for a massive share issue slated for late 1980 or early 1981," Mitchell said.

"Fifty-six per cent of those dividends would go to shareholders in Connecticut. The dollars are best left in B.C. in the pockets of the subscribers."

Alberta nurses walk out

About 6,600 nurses began the province-wide walkout at the end of the night shift.

Picket lines were up at many hospitals, including the major ones in Edmonton and Calgary. A number of hospitals — including three in Edmonton and two in Calgary — are not affected by the strike and will attempt to handle the increased workload.

Bank profit curbs studied

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumer affairs department experts have begun examining the tools foreign governments use to curb excess bank profits and the same methods could be applied here, Consumer Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet said Thursday.

He said in an interview he expects to receive a general report on British, French, and U.S. methods of keeping a fair and even balance between the interest rates charged borrowers and the rates paid depositors.

"I have noticed the spread (between the two rates) is always to the banks' advantage," Ouellet said. "My feeling is that we have to establish some parity. But why the hell is it that one comes first and the second one after?

"That spread is just getting larger and larger."

Bob Rae, New Democratic finance spokesman, charged two weeks ago that banks have been too slow to raise the interest paid on deposits while they have been quick to raise lending rates.

The prime lending rate of the chartered banks — that charged to corporate borrowers with the best credit record — is between 17 and 17.25 per cent.

They pay depositors about 13 per cent.

Profits by the country's 10 major banks totalled $1.1 billion in 1979, up 13.2 per cent over the previous year.

The minister did not say if an investigation of Canadian banks is under way and said he didn't begrudge them fair profits.

He said he does not advocate immediately applying such brakes to sky-high profits here but the coming Bank Act revision could include regulations to protect the public against gouging.

"But I would prefer to see the banks do it themselves," he said.

"The banks are a special club," he said. "In the United States there are hundreds of banks — here they are a select club and therefore have a predominance in the market that is very important.

"They are not in a total monopoly situation like some utilities, but they are not far from it. They can literally make or break people."

Military adopting low profile

QUEBEC (CP) — The Canadian armed forces have cancelled all manoeuvres and deployment of military personnel in Quebec for the duration of the referendum campaign; says Brig.-Gen. Francois Richard.

Richard, base commander at nearby Valcartier army base, says the decision was taken to avoid any anxiety in the population during the campaign, which ends May 20.

During this period, all normal military training will take place within base limits and no armored vehicles or light artillery will be seen on the province's highways or in the countryside.

"We do not want to annoy anybody, and we do not want to create situations where people could falsely interpret our activities," Richard said in an interview published today.

The only military vehicles to be seen on provincial highways during the referendum campaign will be soldiers learning to drive.

Salmon talks fear worst

VANCOUVER (CP) — Negotiations began Thursday on B.C. salmon prices and wages amid predictions of poor runs and fears that a market glut will hold down prices.

Talks were scheduled between the Fisheries Association of B.C., representing canneries and freezing plants, the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union and the Native Brotherhood of B.C., which speaks for Indians in the commercial fishery.

Talks Thursday centred on a new contract for union shoreworkers and UFAWU president Jack Nicol said he is seeking an across-the-board increase of $1.50 an hour and premium increases for industry tradesmen.

Nicol said the union is also seeking a 50-cents-an-hour increase in northern differential, which is currently 35 cents an hour.

Nicol said the union is seeking a cost-of-living-adjustment clause and improvements in vacations and statutory holidays.

Rockslide delays minerals

VANCOUVER (CP) — A rockslide that knocked out the White Pass and Yukon Railway near Skagway, Alaska, is forcing the Cyprus Anvil Mining Corp. to tell its customers they will have to wait for scheduled shipments of lead and zinc concentrates, the corporation said Thursday.

Cyprus Anvil operates the biggest mine in the Yukon, producing 9,100 metric tonnes a day at a lead, zinc and silver open-pit operation 240 kilometres north of Whitehorse.

The rockslide on Wednesday, blamed on the spring thaw, damaged a bridge near the port of Skagway, cutting off the rail link to the Yukon. Repairs are expected to take a minimum of three weeks.

Highway crews were working overtime in an effort to open the road between Skagway and Whitehorse early next week to provide an alternate link. The road is closed during the winter and usually does not open until May.

Four fires in Prince George area

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Forestry officials are hoping for rain as four forest fires burn in the Prince George forest region.

Weather officials say this is the driest April in 20 years, the winter snowpack levels seldom went above 70 per cent of normal and all this followed one of the driest falls on record.

Grit favors break law: lawyer

VANCOUVER (CP) — A $135-million copper-molybdenum mine on B.C.'s north coast will be in violation of the federal Fisheries Act when it begins operation in May, 1981, because the owners have obtained special treatment from the federal Liberals, says a lawyer for the Nishga Indians.

Don Rosenbloom charged Thursday that Amax of Canada Ltd. got special treatment from the Liberal cabinet in April, 1979, to allow direct discharge into Alice Arm of 100 million tons of tailings from its mine 150 kilometres north of Prince Rupert.

"Since Amax couldn't meet the specifications of the federal Fisheries Act within a country mile, the cabinet of the Liberal government passed an order-in-council allowing the company to discharge effluent into Alice Arm in excess of all normal regulations," said Rosenbloom.

Police accept

VANCOUVER (CP) — Members of the Vancouver Policemen's Union have voted 66 per cent in favor of a new one-year contract, the union announced Thursday.

The new agreement gives the 929 police officers a 7.59-per-cent wage increase, retroactive to Jan. 1, and an additional 3.68 per cent July 1.

The increases will bring a first class constable's salary to $2,053 a month from $1,845.

Police will also be able to lobby the provincial government for legislation changes to allow retirement at age 50 if there are 25 years of service.

Tram has them up in air

NORTH BEND (CP) — A 44-year-old tramway — the only regular link between Boston Bar and this isolated community — has residents fuming and frightened as it swings above the boiling waters of the Fraser River.

The problem, they say, is that the tram is out of commission almost as often as it runs, and when it does break down passengers can end up stranded mid-cable.

That's what happened last week when a tramload was left dangling for 40 minutes. And when the tram is broken, children and adults are forced to scramble down a steep embarkment to tugboats which ferry them across the river.

The tram can carry one vehicle at a time as well, but when it's out of order the only way a vehicle can get to North Bend — a former major CP Rail switching point about 225 kilometres northeast of Vancouver — is along rough forestry roads, a 50-kilometre round trip.

By tram the round trip across the canyon takes six minutes.

Parents are afraid an accident will injure or kill their kindergarten-age children who must use the tram each day to go to school.

"On weekends, it's just terrible," says Ms. Brookes. "Sometimes you'll get 40 vehicles waiting on either side and that means long delays."

Residents would like the provincial government to build a bridge across the canyon but agree it would be costly.

Charles Harrington of Boston Bar, whose five-year-old daughter uses the tram every day, said it was built in 1936.

"It ran fairly uneventfully until the highways ministry automated it — the more automatic equipment they had the more trouble the tram had," he said.

Director sentenced in fraud

VANCOUVER (CP) — John Francis Guail, 58, a former director of the B.C. Central Credit Union, has been convicted in county court of three counts of fraud and one count of criminal breach of trust.

Guail, also a former general manager of the Stry Credit Union, was sentenced this week to two years less a day.

He was convicted of defrauding the Stry Credit Union of nearly $56,000 by misrepresenting the value of property and claiming expenses for which he had been reimbursed.

Gracious Japanese embarass visitors

By MAX LOW

Just back from an exhausting but exciting trip to Japan, the Victoria YM-YWCA juvenile girls' volleyball team is bidding for its fifth straight B.C. title this weekend in Kelowna.

And, if they retain their provincial crown, they'll be off to Calgary to play in the national girls' volleyball championships May 9 to 11. The Victoria girls are also defending the national under-18 title they won last year but right now all they can talk about is the games they played and the new friends they made in Japan.

The Y juvenile team plus a few older girls from the club's junior (under-20) squad made up a tour party of 13 coached by Ron Greene and assistant Boeing Quan.

Although they ran into some pretty stiff opposition and, in fact, lost six of their eight games, the Victoria girls were billeted with Japanese families and were treated as visiting sports stars by both the volleyball officials and the press. A week before they arrived, Japanese-language newspapers in the northern cities of Morioka and Morbara carried long stories and published individual photographs of the Y girls.

"The Japanese people, particularly those in Morioka, were so kind to the girls and the hospitality was so overwhelming it was embarrassing," their coach said when they got back.

They weren't quite so kind to the Victoria girls on the court, though.

The Y girls opened on a winning note, edging Morioka High School All-Stars 8-15, 15-12, 16-14. And, though they were shaded 7-15, 15-10, 15-5, 9-15, 15-8 in a five-set thriller by Morioka Senior All-Stars and then beaten 10-15, 16-14, 15-3, 15-13 by Ichinoseki High School All-Stars, the Victorians beat Ichinoseki Senior All-Stars 16-14, 15-9, 15-10 to even their series at two wins and two losses.

So far so good. But then the Y girls ran up against Hitachi Mobara, the eighth-ranked company team in Japan, and were crushed 15-3, 15-3, 15-11. They played the Hitachi girls again the next day — but that wasn't any better for the Victoria squad as they went down 15-1, 15-5 this time!

Victoria then were humbled 15-5, 15-5 by the highly-rated Mobara Cultural High School and ended their tour with a 15-5, 15-3, 15-6 defeat at the hands of Tsukuba University, the second-ranked university team in the country.

Apart from the difficulty of getting victories on the court, the toughest thing the Canadian girls ran into was getting on and off the trains (they travelled by rail everywhere) with their bags, particularly in rush hour.

"The trains are just packed with people and there's nowhere to put any luggage," Greene explained. "Yet all the pushing and shoving to get on and off is accepted with a quiet kind of dignity."

And his girls accepted their defeats well, said the coach, who pointed out that although the level on the whole seems comparable to B.C., the standard in the high schools over there is very high.

"All their tournaments are straight knockouts," Greene said. "Teams get no second chance and the result is they play with a fanatical effort in every game."

Greene is the official volleyball registrar for B.C. (where we now have around 180 teams) and he said there is something like 12,000 registered teams in Japan.

"The Japanese are all so crazy on sport and, though baseball is number one for the spectators, as far as participation is concerned, volleyball is the most widely-played game in Japan," he explained.

But the emphasis on all sorts of sports really opened the Victoria girls' eyes.

A huge sports store they visited had a whole separate floor for baseball gear, then one for volleyball equipment, one for golf, one for tennis and so on.

And, said Green, if you can't sleep, you can walk across the playing fields of companies like Hitachi at 6 or 6:30 in the morning and see lots of people out practicing their baseball pitch or their golf swing.

Canadians lead

HYERES, France (CP) — Terry McLaughlin of Toronto, with crewmember Evert Bastet, had a first and a second in two races Thursday to take a clear lead in the Flying Dutchman class at the Hyeres Week of Yachting regatta.

The Toronto skipper, 23, scored a victory in the opening race of the series Sunday. The 27-country regatta then ground practically to a halt in the face of 64-kilometre-an-hour winds. The winds abated to between 15 and 24 kilometres Thursday.

Bastet, a stocky 29-year-old from Montreal who has crewed on a Flying Dutchman the last three Olympics, said the race Thursday was one of the toughest he's engaged in because "the wind shifted all the tiime to 30 degrees."

Golfer Ken Steeves dies of leukemia

Flying firemen on red alert to save forests

By AB KENT

Fourteen aircraft and 28 pilots are on the flight line at Vancouver Island bases in readiness to attack forest fires in the 1980 fire season which opened this week.

According to early forecasts this year could be a repeat of a bad fire season in 1979.

But most of the island-based pilots and flying tankers will serve outside the province under contracts with Alberta and Manitoba forest services.

If there are fires in Vancouver Island woods, Abbotsford-based Conair Aviation Ltd. will supply some of its 15 water bombers under contract to B.C. Forest Service and flown from a total of 20 summer bases around the province.

Two companies operate fixed wing water tankers from Vancouver Island bases — both using flying boats which can pick up fresh loads by skimming the surface of lakes within ready reach of a fire.

Flying Fireman Ltd., of Patricia Bay airport has eight Canso flying boats, one more than last year, each with 800-gal. capacity.

One will be kept at Pat Bay ready for roving assignments and the rest of the aircraft will spend the summer in Alberta and Manitoba.

Forest Industries Flying Tankers Ltd., owned by a consortium of five forest companies, bases two 6,000-gal. Martin Mars flying boats at Sproat Lake. These serve the owners primarily and are not contracted out but will assist the forest service when required.

Also available for quick-strike firefighting are 24 island-based commercial helicopters capable of carrying 120-gal. water drop drums to douse fires in the early stages. Two others are operated by Flying Tankers as support for the Mars bombers.

Vancouver Island Helicopters Ltd., of Pat Bay, has machines scattered up-island and along the coast with bases at Prince Rupert, Kitsault and Stewart, each with access to company-owned drop buckets and fire retardant mixture.

About eight other helicopters fly from island bases, including those owned by Okanagan Helicopters from Campbell River and Port McNeill, Highland Helicopters at Tahsis and McGillivary Helicopters at Nanaimo.

Chief pilot Mike Pearson of Flying Fireman, said 1979 was one of the company's biggest years. Operational flights counted for about 2,000 hours, two to three times normal.

His 20 pilots are under four-month contracts of which the first two weeks consist of training flights. In a busy season they could each earn $30,000 for their hazardous work.

Despite the age of the Second World War Canso aircraft, none have as much as 6,000 hours of flying time logged, and add only 100-200 hours a year giving them many potential years of service.

Pearson cites the venerable DC-3, dating from the late 1930s and 1940s, many of which are still flying with 70,000 hours behind them. Both aircraft use the same engines which remain plentiful though no longer manufactured.

But even the price of old-fashioned aircraft is subject to inflation. A complete Canso, available for a song after the war, costs $400,000 today, Pearson said.

Don Owen, head of BCFS fire protection branch, draws a logical conclusion from the fact that the snow pack in B.C. is deficient and that winter rains were less than usual.

"Without spring rains in April and May, we could be into an early firefighting season," he said.

Fires have already broken out since last weekend. One at Bella Coola was caused by a logging operator and several in the Cariboo were attributed to carelessness.

The forest service relies on land-based tankers flown by Conair. These are all ex-military craft, consisting mainly of A 26 conversions. There are also some DC-6s and three new Fire Cat conversions of the familiar maritime patrol Tracker.

DC-6s have the largest tank capacity, 2,500 gals.

Island bases are maintained for the summer at Pat Bay and Campbell River.

The forest service also has a new tool for quick strikes against embryo fires — the Rapattack, for which three helicopters are chartered.

Crews of young, physically fit men are trained to rappel down ropes from hovering helicopters to inaccessible fires such as remote lightning strikes. They use chainsaws and shovels to prepare a helicopter landing site and do what they can to contain the fire until a suppression crew with more equipment can be flown in.

These will be based mainly at Kamloops, their training centre, where about 24 men will stand ready. Another 20 will be at Riske Creek and 8-10 at Lower Post. Any will be available for firefighting on Vancouver Island when needed, Owen said.

A quickie report by Capital Region District staff on the bridge-tunnel link to the mainland drew some snarky comments from one director at a planning meeting this week.

Victoria Ald. Bob Wright, a B.C. Ferries board member, said he was suprised regional board staff bothered.

"Even if you only spent 30 minutes on it, that's too long," Wright told planners.

The report said a bridge-tunnel connection being promoted by Science and Technology Minister Pat McGeer would bring economic benefits to Vancouver Island, reduce the need for inconvenient ferry travel but would probably have adverse environmental impact on the Gulf Islands and drive up land values making housing difficult to obtain.

Wright said the government has no business looking at a tunnel for another 20 or 30 years.

"I've always been under the impression that if you ignore it, it will go away," he commented.

Nature-loving Saanich council this week picked several members of the animal kingdom to represent the municipality.

After a brief argument aldermen decided to replace the bear on its new coat-of-arms with a cougar and send the design to the College of Arms in England for approval.

The coat-of-arms will have the corporate seal in the middle, a deer on one side, a cougar on the other, and a swan on top. Traditional helmet and fancy border complete the design.

The approval process takes some time and municipal staff don't expect the coat-of-arms to be ready before Saanich's 75th birthday in 1981.

Anyone looking for an old mansion may just be able to find a bargain in Langford.

The Juan de Fuca Hospital Society has just such a building and it's looking for a use for it.

Society president Charlie Jackson says the building might be made available to someone who can convince the society that there's an appropriate use for it and that it can bring up to the necessary building and fire standards.

Mayor Bill Tindall today questioned the legal advice from city solicitor Jakob de Villiers and said he can see no roadblocks in the way of Victoria assisting the waterfront convention centre.

"There is some misunderstanding or misinterpretation. Jakob is just expressing his own opinion here," the mayor said in an interview.

"There are no serious legal roadblocks."

A report by de Villiers to city council says the city's 1979 pledge to pay $200,000 a year to cover losses of the centre (to be built by the Provincial Capital Commission and run by the Pan Pacific Conference and Trade Centre Society) has no basis in law.

"It is beyond the powers of council to enter into any agreement to pay such operating losses," says city solicitor Jakob de Villiers in the report requested by council.

But Mayor Tindall said there are at least four ways of doing this, all above board. One is the suggestion of the Chamber of Commerce to raise the business tax to cover the deficit. Another is a section in the act which the city used a while ago to donate the Crystal Garden to the province.

This would require the annual approval of the minister of municipal affairs.

"We have not suggested it be done in any illegal or unorthodox manner," said Tindall.

Borrowing a phrase from de Villiers' report, the mayor said the lawyer's five-page survey "doesn't tell the whole story." For example, De Villiers said he assumed from the absence of direct council motions that the city intended to donate the $1.7 million parkade to the province which it has promised to build.

The mayor said this was not true, that council and its finance committee followed a careful step by step procedure and its first motion on the subject dated November, 1978 endorses a government proposal that the parkade be city-owned and operated.

Ald. Robin Blencoe, who asked for the report, said the de Villiers report convinces him more than ever that the Pan Pacific group should not be allowed to control the centre.

He wants a joint municipal-provincial board in control. It would bring in "objective management" to run the centre, after a thorough review of the whole project to determine if another location can be found. Pan Pacific could remain as an advisor.

"It's just asking for trouble," the alderman said of the present plan to install the Pan Pacific group in control.

"You can see what happened with this. I think it's been full steam ahead and never mind the legalities or the rights of the community."

It is unclear exactly who will own and operate the centre. De Villiers said in his report he has seen draft agreements between Pan Pacific and the PCC which provide for the whole centre to be leased to the businessmen's group.

The mayor said this morning the PCC is going to be owner and operator, with a management board on which Pan Pacific would have several seats.

PCC minutes released by Blencoe dated Oct. 3, 1979 state that Pan Pacific will be the operating agency, although the city and province each will have two members on the board.

De Villiers outlines three possible ways of overcoming the legal difficulties, the simplest of them for the city to lease the centre from the province and operate it as a municipal business.

This would eliminate Pan Pacific, the non-profit organization of downtown businessmen who have been working more than a year with the B.C. government's capital commission to get the centre going.

Two other solutions would keep Pan-Pacific in the saddle as operator and manager of the centre, but they are more complicated, according to de Villiers.

The city's lawyer makes no recommendations in his report, but it appears from a careful reading that the first option — a city takeover — would be the simplest from a legal standpoint. The Municipal Act allows a municipality to operate such a business.

"In that event there would be no tax liability and there would be no requirement on the part of the city to make any contribution to the operating losses of another party," says de Villiers.

"Whether council would wish to accept the responsibility of operating the convention centre and whether the province would be willing to pay the city half the operating losses are not, of course, matters on which I can comment."

If council does take this route, de Villiers says the $1.7 million the city has promised for the parkade could be paid to the capital commission as the rental of the premises for the term of the lease.

City's taxpayers facing $1M tab for centre

Victoria taxpayers are going to have to pay at least $1 million over the next seven years to keep the waterfront convention centre afloat, according to Provincial Capital Commission documents.

Under a Jan. 30, 1979 city council resolution, Victoria is committed to pay half the annual losses, with its share no more than $200,000 a year, in 1978 dollars adjusted annually for inflation.

Council also agreed to pay any municipal property taxes. If the whole $8 million project was a commercial venture, taxes would be around $200,000 a year.

However, it's expected most of the project will be exempt. Mayor Bill Tindall said today if the Provincial Capital Commission remains the owner and operator of the centre, then only those parts leased to retail operators — a restaurant for example — would be taxable.

Minutes of the PCC made public by Ald. Robin Blencoe last week indicate for the first time what it's going to cost to operate the convention centre at Wharf and Fort, due to open in the spring of 1982.

The centre will incur losses even before it opens its doors because of startup costs. The city's share for this period is estimated at $190,000.

Revenue figures are calculated in 1979 dollars and escalated by seven per cent for inflation, according to the capital commission minutes, but it does not say whether the same formula is used for expenses.

Estimated losses start to mount after the centre opens. In the first full year, fiscal 1982-83, operating costs are pegged at $868,200 and revenue at $513,000 leaving a deficit of $355,200 — half to be picked up by city taxpayers.

The annual operating losses decline over the following years, according to the PCC estimates, to $208,900 in 1986-87.

The total amount expected from the city over this seven-year period is almost $1 million. PCC budget projections doesn't extend beyond 1986-87.

That doesn't take into account the $90,000 annual revenue expected from the city-owned parkade, which Victoria city council has agreed to build at a cost of $1.7 million. None of the construction costs will come directly off homeowners' property tax bills, however.

Some $1,274,000 will come out of the city's off street parking reserve fund, which is all the nickels and dimes stuffed in parking meters by motorists.

Another $60,000 will come from the Broughton Street parkade in the basement of the new Waddington building, a provincial government office complex. The city operates the parkade and shares profits with the province. Another $374,000 will come from profits of the Victoria parking commission, the civic body which actually runs the municipal parkades.

Crash kills two at Chemainus

Two Port Alberni residents were killed Thursday in a two-vehicle head-on collision near Chemainus.

RCMP identified the victims as Laurence Hart, 65, and Margaret Doherr, 46.

The two, neighbors, were returning home in Hart's Volkswagen van after a day in Victoria when the crash occurred at 3:50 p.m. on the Trans Canada Highway 2½ kilometres north of Chemainus.

Randolph Falk, 19, of Chemainus, the driver of the other vehicle, a pickup truck, suffered only minor cuts and was treated at Chemainus hospital and later released. Two passengers in his vehicle escaped injury.

Police said Mrs. Doherr was killed instantly and Hart died while being rushed by ambulance to hospital in Victoria.

Ask the Times

Q. My wife and I are visiting your sun-drenched (?) Pacific metropolis. Our city map shows Battleford Avenue in large black type. I was born and raised in historic old Battleford in northwest Saskatchewan. Could you advise how this name for the avenue was arrived at? K.C.

A. Because this is one of the oldest streets in the area the exact reason for naming it is not available in any books. But the Provincial Archives believe it was named Battleford because it was near the railroad tracks, like the original battle which took place at the fort on the Battle River in Saskatchewan. This bears credence when you notice that a nearby street here is called Regina Avenue.

volunteering

A little quiz on volunteering — answer true or false:

1. There are over 4 million volunteers in Canada.

2. In North America there are as many men who volunteer as women.

3. In the Greater Victoria area between one-quarter and one-third of the population do volunteer work.

4. Through the Victoria Volunteer Bureau 4,176 people were placed in volunteer jobs in the last five years.

5. Since 1975 there has been a 90 per cent increase in volunteers coming through the bureau.

All the above statements are true. Surprised? Here are some particulars that may surprise you even more.

The economic value of volunteer work in Canada has never been included in the Gross National Product. However, a study in 1971 calculated it at least 3.3 per cent — more than twice that of the very large pulp and paper industry. The study did not count church volunteers, board members and citizens' committees.

Volunteering is often stereotyped as the occupation of middle-aged women. In Victoria, the fact is that almost 50 per cent of volunteers are men.

In Victoria, given that about 28 per cent of the population volunteers, it means over 6,000 people give some time to others. At the estimated average time of 3 hours per person per week that is 18,000 hours of work done per week in this area. At minimum wage, this represents close to $3 million a year. In economic terms it is plain that volunteers create an enormous impact on a community.

At the Victoria Volunteer Bureau, which handles only a portion of the volunteers in Victoria, interest in volunteering has been steadily increasing. Whether this is an accurate reflection of a growing trend in volunteering, or mainly the result of better publicity is unknown. However an interesting Bureau statistic points out that by far the biggest percentage of interested people contacting the Bureau heard of this service through the column you are now reading.

Volunteering is a big thing in Victoria, as well as the rest of Canada and the continent. A lot is going on in the world of volunteering. Without volunteers it would be impossible to sustain the level of services provided in a community. Services we have come to see as "necessary" would not simply be reduced, or unburdened of all "frills" — some would be completely eliminated.

If fewer volunteers were available programs would at first be reduced. Consequently, in many cases, government and other funds providing agency building, materials, and salaries for basic staff might be withdrawn, with the resulting disappearance of the agency itself.

Consider several groups in Victoria — what would happen if the volunteer staffs were removed? Silver Threads Services has 900 volunteers; Juvenile Detention Home, 115; Royal Jubilee Hospital, 240; Canadian National Institute for the Blind, 115.

The time put in by volunteers is only the tip of the iceberg. Besides the economic problems associated with a lack of volunteers there are other pressures. In government agencies and those groups not likely to completely disappear without volunteers, it is apparent that the ability to cope with a growing number of users (patients, inmates, residents,) would deteriorate. More pressure would be put on paid staff, resulting in lower quality of work, high turnover rates, and lowering of morale. Often, when services have to be cut, some groups of people find themselves either without any help or in the wrong kind of care. This is now the case with some elderly people in some regions of Canada. It, in turn, can restrict services to other groups.

The picture is bleak when we remove volunteers. But that, happily, is not the case in Victoria. On most areas of concern sufficient volunteers insure that things run smoothly. Consider some of the things done by volunteers in this city. In its 21 hour telethon last March the B.C. Lions Society raised $115,425 for disabled children. The funds will go to the new Easter Seal Camp Shawnigan. The United Way, with the help of 1500 volunteers, collected $1,006,000 in its 1979 campaign. Already, 100 volunteers are preparing for Fall, 1980. In the past year about 46 young boys and girls have been matched up with Big Brothers and Sisters in Victoria. Now approximately 23 Big Sisters and 61 Big Brothers regularly share activities with these younger people, offering them support and friendship. NEED Crisis Line regularly handles 1000 calls per month, often intervening in crisis situations where callers have nowhere else to turn. Even the Pacific Opera Association, with 150 volunteers, would be unable to give Victoria the pleasure of its musical productions without volunteers.

Volunteer Recognition Week begins on Sunday; from April 20 to 26 attention will be focused on the contributions and accomplishments of volunteers. Please think about what volunteering means to our community, and join with us all in giving a big thank you to volunteers!

The Victoria Volunteer Bureau is open for inquiries from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. from Monday to Friday. Please phone 386-2269.

Glanford turns out in spades

By AUDREY JOHNSON

One of the largest representations of any Greater Victoria School in the Victoria Music Festival is being made by one of the medium size elementary schools.

Out of an enrolment of 371, choir, speech and dance entries involve an impressive 75 per cent of the students. In dance alone this week, there are 11 entries.

Glanford has several dance clubs — creative, folk, jazz and rhythmics — in which Grades 2 to 7 participate, physical ed teacher Jean Bunch tells you. These are extra-curricular activities and children eagerly spend time before classes in the morning and in the late afternoon and early evening, participating.

As co-ordinator of the school dance section of the festival, assisted by Penny Walker of Torquay School, Mrs. Bunch was in the middle of a busy week when interviewed but her zeal and enthusiasm for the work and the school came through with the freshness of day one.

On Friday afternoons there is a fine arts club in which all sorts of things from clay modelling to macrame are explored.

But Glanford students are also active and good in sports. This year the school's girls' field hockey and basketball teams won the city elementary school championships.

Jean says two factors are involved in all this constructive activity: a wonderfully dedicated staff who invest a lot of time and energy to provide the youngsters with challenge and stimulation; and terrific parental support.

It's a mother for example who directs the jazz dance club. Parents make all the dance costumes and take on other more difficult construction chores.

One of this year's festival entries involves tiny primary graders doing a hobby horse number. Mothers have produced a stable of undeniably the most beautiful "horses" anyone could imagine.

Handsome heads in colorful fabrics, firmly molded and stuffed, with flashing eyes and wooly manes, bridled and belled, tempt anyone with imagination to mount and go galloping off.

There is a full-time music program under Shirley Campbell, the work mostly choral at the present time although recorders are used extensively.

It doesn't seem strange to this reporter that Glanford has one of the lowest absentee rates in city schools, although Principal Robert McKay is non-committal on the point.

Still it does make sense to believe that with so many interesting things happening as addenda to the regular study program, youngsters don't want to miss a school day.

Jean sums up by saying that it is all a team effort involving teachers, students and parents in a determination to acquire skills and experiences that are pleasurable as well as useful. And to offer incentive to keep the kids occupied, interested and happy.

VGH board backed on abortions

The Southern Vancouver Island Hospital Society has backed the actions of Victoria General Hospital's board on the question of whether abortions will be performed at the hospital.

A motion saying the society supports the majority of the hospital board members in their efforts to restore abortion services at VGH passed by a vote of 27 to 22.

The motion was brought by Jennifer Lowen, a new member of the hospital society and president of the Canadian Abortion Rights Action League.

Lowen said abortion services at the hospital were ended by two members of the therapeutic abortion committee and claimed the committee was operating under a different set of guidelines from all previous committees.

One society member commented: "Women are going to go to abortionists. Why in the world are they so self righteous in this hospital. Do they want them to go to butchers."

Another woman who said she is a nurse who has worked in several abortion clinics, opposed the motion.

"I'm here to say I've seen thousands of women come through those clinics with some awfully selfish reasons. I've had women say to me it would interfere with their trip to Hawaii," she told the meeting.

Asked if a majority of board members favor abortion, board chairman Alan Patterson said he couldn't answer since no precise poll had been taken.

Another member complained after the vote that only five of the 11 board members present — two in favor, three against — had voted.

But Syd Langhelt, one of those who abstained, said he had refrained from voting because he considered the question a comment on the board's actions.

Langhelt said because he is on the board, he did not want to influence the outcome.

On another controversial subject — whether an obstetric and pediatric facility should be located at the new Victoria General Hospital on Helmcken Road — the society came close to embarassing the board.

A motion which was defeated by a 24 to 23 vote called for the society to inform the health ministry it would prefer the obstetric and pediatric facility be left in Victoria.

"It would be unfortunate if this society endorsed this motion," said Patterson.

He said the plans for the obstetric and pediatric facility had been decided at the regional and provincial level of government.

He pointed out that it would be operated by the society.

Layoff job training

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Firestone Tire Rubber Co. says 8,500 workers destined for layoffs from their jobs in Ohio, Pennsylvania and California will receive training — at company expense — on how to hunt for new employment.

Vic General week eyed

Members of the Southern Vancouver Island Hospital Society voted Thursday to hold a Victoria General Hospital Week.

Dr. Eugene Kaellis, a member of the hospital board, proposed that the society sponsor the week to make the public aware of what the hospital does, how it operates and to help recruit new society members.

"We've observed people joining the society to promote specific issues or to elect a certain candidate to the board," he said.

But, he said, the best society members are those whose sole purpose is promoting the general operation of the hospital.

Kaellis referred to the situation which has occurred at Vancouver General Hospital in the last few years.

Its society was taken over by pro- and anti-abortion factions in 1978 which eventually resulted in the take over of the hospital board by the provincial government.

"If you trace the series of events there you'll see that it started with a tremendous polarization of the society," he said.

today's markets

Toronto

The Toronto stock market was up moderately in moderately active mid-afternoon trading today.

Trading in shares of Keeprite Inc., which was halted Thursday, resumed at the opening and by 2 p.m. the stock was down ⅞ to 13⅞.

Keeprite said the Ontario Securities Commission did not approve the company's proposal to repurchase up to 600,000 of its outstanding common shares at $17 a share.

Trading in shares of Husky Oil Ltd., which was halted during the morning, resumed at 2 p.m. up 1½ to $82½.

The U.S. government said a natural gas field discovered by Husky last week in the National Petroleum Reserve in Alaska is in a geologic structure larger in size than the Prudhoe Bay oilfield.

But Husky said it has no interest in the well. It is acting in a joint venture as contract operator in an oil and gas exploration program for the U.S. government, it said.

The exchange also said the Ontario Securities Commission issued a cease-trading order Friday in shares of New Kelore Mines Ltd. because the company was not up-to-date on required filings. The stock was halted on the exchange Thursday and last traded at 43 cents.

Among industrials, Falconbridge Nickel A jumped 4¼ to $100¼, Gulf Canada 2 to $140½, Husky Oil 2 to $82.

Vancouver

Prices were down in heavy trading today on the Vancouver Stock Exchange. Volume at 11:00 a.m. PST was 2,160,867 shares.

Of the stocks that traded, 103 advanced, 134 declined and 188 remained unchanged.

B.C. Resources Investment Corp. led trading in the industrials, dropping .05 to $6.40 on 43,080 shares and B.C. Sugar Refinery A remained steady at $34½ on 10,000. Northway Gestalt was unchanged at $2.00 on 4,000 and Proflex Ltd. was steady at .25 on 2,000. Keg Restaurants remained steady at $2.00 and Canadian Javelin Ltd. was unchanged at $1.30.

On the resource and development board, Taurus Resources declined .05 to $3.80 on 130,600 shares and Tintina Silver Mines gained .45 to $4.25 on 49,400. Charriot Resources Rights remained steady at .01 on 34,753 and Pacific Resources dropped .02 to .40 on 28,500. Sweetwater advanced .06 to $2.20 and United MacFie Mines rose .29 to $3.00.

New York

Several large banks lowered their prime rates to 19½ per cent, two days after Chase Manhattan of New York cut its basic charge on blue-chip loans to 19¾.

The reductions gave new impetus to hopes that interest rates might have reached a turning point after their long climb over the past three years.

But analysts said traders still seemed edgy over the prospective impact of the business slowdown that is expected to accompany any substantial drop in rates.

Auto stocks remained under pressure. Ford Motor dropped 1¾ to $23⅜ and General Motors 2 to $40½, both in active trading.

London

The Financial Times index was down two points to 440.6.

Golds firmed while banks and industrials eased.

Canadian stocks were mixed.

Unlikely dance team

Superstar Liza Minnelli, guest stars with the most famous ballet dancer in the world in IBM Presents Baryshnikov On Broadway, airing Thursday, at 10 p.m. on Channel 4, when she teams with Mikhail Baryshnikov.

Liza's awards include two Tonys, and an Oscar. Her first TV special, Liza with a Z, won an Emmy.

A long-time friend of Baryshnikov's, Liza praises him to the skies. "He's so good," she says, "but if he didn't have fun, he wouldn't be as good as he is. When I watch him I just can't believe he is doing what he does."

During the taping of the special program, each would often ask the other's opinion about the work and view their numbers played back on a monitor. Liza would often say "Misha, will you come and look at this and tell me if you think it's okay."

In talking about the show, Liza points out she and Misha are an unlikely combination.

TV Mailbag

GOOD 'OL THIEVES — I saw an episode of The Dukes of Hazzard a while ago that was a complete rip-off of Smokey and the Bandit, with the runaway bride and the cops in hot pursuit. How do they do this kind of thing on TV? — Lucy Champlain

Recycling scripts and storylines is what television is all about. They would have run out of ideas soon after Uncle Miltie went off the air, were it not for "creative" borrowing, not only from other media, but even the TV medium itself. In the late '60s, Warners used to take a Maverick script and turn it into a 77 Sunset Strip episode with just a few changes of locale and plot. That's show biz. As for The Dukes, its entire premise is a rip-off of Smokey, so why not lift the entire plot?

HOMES TODAY

One of Cowichan Valley's geodesic domes

By ANNE SWANNELL

One of three geodesic domes built simultaneously on steep wooded property on the road that winds around Maple Bay, this house, like the other two, is hard to see through the trees as you drive by.

Owner/builder John Fowler, a member of the sixties generation trying to break away from traditional values, originally intended to put up something much less sophisticated than the house he lives in with wife Linda and their two children.

The Fowlers found the old proverb "a thing worth doing is worth doing well" applied particularly to house construction, and so John feels he ended up with a rather 'bourgeois' house. The only thing bourgeois about this house is the concern with good materials and good workmanship, since it's very well-finished outside and in, and a far cry from the 'hippy houses' some of the early geodesic domes turned out to be.

For a peek inside it, see page 6.

Sit back save in this easily-made lawn chair

By Steve Ellingson

The problem for most of us these days is that we have too much month left over at the end of the money. Yet here we are with a long hot summer coming and no lawn furniture.

But there's no reason for that to be a drain on the family bank account. Do-it-yourselfers have been getting along just fine for years, at bargain prices too. With a little wood and a few tools, anyone can build handsome furnishings for around the house.

The sturdy lawn chair pictured here is inexpensive (when you build it yourself) and it's also tops in comfort. You will notice it has a curved seat and back which will fit everybody's curves. It's put together with screws and bolts and will last for years.

The pattern for building this chair is full-size. You need only trace the pattern parts on wood, then saw them out and finally put them together. Any inexperienced amateur can do it with success.

A list of required materials is included along with step-by-step directions. Elaborate tools are not needed.

To obtain the full-size California Lawn Chair pattern No. 55, send $2.00 (add .50 cents extra for postage and handling) by cheque or money order to: U-Bild Patterns, Box 160, Cote St. Luc, Montreal, P.Q. H4V 2Y3.

COLLECTIBLES

By JOHN HEARN

Two weeks ago I was writing about old stock certificates as interesting collectibles and now I have a letter from W. W. Montgomery of Roseneath, Ont., who owns a £100 debenture issued by the Province of Canada in 1854 at 6 per cent for the construction of the Cobourg-Peterborough Railway. Attached are £33-3 coupons, mostly unclipped. Is this a Collector's Item?

Obviously here is a whole field of historical collectibles which, so far as I know, has been quite neglected. I would like to hear from anyone who is collecting old debentures and will share the wealth with the rest of our readers.

Nancy Ross of Ottawa has a collection of 1927 vintage English comic books and is curious about the possible market.

When it comes to collectibles — as opposed to fine antiques — there is virtually no market at all for English items. Canadiana in all its forms is most popular with exceptions made for some American items. Comic books, baseball cards, 78 records and Coca Cola collectibles are good examples of such exceptions. Where Canadian collectibles are plentiful, postcards for instance, there is no interest even in the American versions.

What I am describing as 'collectibles' it must be remembered, are things which have no value in themselves other than their collectibility factor. Fine chinaware or any artifact merit generates interest and holds its value regardless of country or origin.

And speaking of comic books, here is a letter from Mr. Uhurrau of Victoria who congratulates me on being 'less sensationalist and more realistic than most writers on the subject' and then goes on to take issue with me as follows:

1. You only concentrated on older, rarer books and ignored more recent and valuable books. Age is not a pricing criterion as a general rule.

2. You did not emphasize condition as strongly as you should. This encourages people to expect high prices for comics in poor condition.

3. You did not point out that the artwork is significant and is being taken very seriously. Work by artists of excellence results in higher prices.

4. You emphasised characters and stories rather than the artform itself. New formats are beginning to emerge which will have their effect on the market.

I am always happy to be corrected and west coast readers who would like to consult with Mr. Uhurrau (to whom I apologize if I have spelt him wrongly; will find him at 307-477 Superior Street, Victoria, B.C., V8V-4T5.

Mrs. Frieberg of Caledon, Ont., has a complete collection of Life magazines from 1960 onward and is interested in its possible resale value.

Old Life magazines sell in the 50 cents to $2 range. Special issues such as the Marilyn Monroe or Kennedy Memorial editions will bring twice that and numbers with Coke ads on the back cover will also fetch a higher price.

This, however, is not an answer to Mrs. Frieberg's question. Those are the prices which people who are looking for individual editions to make up their own complete sets would expect to pay. It is part of the fun of collecting to search swap-and-shops and garage sales for that special missing issue. In collecting, Robert Louis Stevenson's adage — 'T'is better to travel hopefully than to arrive' — very much applies; the joy of building a collection, one piece at a time is vastly greater than acquiring one ready made. I suspect these magazines will be difficult to dispose of — but I will be glad to ass on any enquiries that come in.

Reader's letters should be addressed to Collector's Item, c-o your newspaper, R. R. No. 1, Lowbanks, Ont., N0A 1K9.

Energy savers

Cooking: Don't use a high flame when a low one will do. Don't preheat the oven too long. Don't use the oven to warm the room. Cover saucepans while cooking.

Washers, dishwashers: Save hot water (and the fuel that heats it) by running full loads only. The same holds true for clothes dryers.

House heating: In cool weather turn the thermostat down when you go to bed. Draw drapes at night, close fireplace flues, air vents etc., when not in use. Keep thermostat down to approximately 68° when you're away all day.

Make sure all appliances are operating efficiently. Don't overwork your furnace by making it struggle to blow air through an old, clogged filter. Check to see if your gas range produces a pure blue flame. (A yellow flame indicates improper combustion.)

NOW YOU KNOW

By GEORGE DALGLEISH

One way to build a dome

Q. We are planning on building a new home in the near future and wanted to do most of the work ourselves. We have been looking at the dome home and find that its unique design is quite appealing to us. What do you think about dome homes? How practical are they?

A. Recently I investigated the construction of a dome home and found that compared to conventionally built homes it is very efficient and rather simple to construct even though it may look complicated.

I look at a dome home that was manufactured by Hex-Dome Manufacturing and Sales in Winnipeg, and was quite impressed with the versatility and efficiency of the dome home. Dome homes are manufactured by this company and others and are available right across Canada.

Because of the structure of the dome home which consists of 24 pre-assembled triangular panels and 3 pre-assembled trapezoid panels, the total interior volume of a Hex-Dome home is less for the same square footage of a conventional home since you don't have square walls and a flat ceiling. Since the total volume of space is cut down, the cost of heating is also cut down. This particular dome home is available in four inch or six inch walls and I highly recommend that regardless of where you live in this country, you use the six inch walls.

In my investigation I found that it seems best to slightly compress fiberglass insulation in the entire dome area with no airspaces. Remember that an almost perfect vapour barrier is necessary on the interior which would mean gluing the polyethylene vapour barrier together. I recommend you use 4 or 6 mil polyethylene and not only glue it where it meets but also around light fixtures and electrical plugs. A perfect interior vapour barrier will do much for the efficiency of the insulation.

Since the dome is self-supporting, no interior bearing walls are necessary, so therefore it is easy to arrange your partition walls to suit practically any need. Conventional electrical wiring, heating and cooling systems can be installed.

The basic shell goes up very quickly, being possible to assemble it in one day with four people. Once the shell is in place on a pre-built floor or foundation then you can take your leisure time in finishing the interior. By building any home yourself you will save a considerable amount of money since labour costs are very high for any building these days.

The exterior of the Hex-Dome home can be finished with cedar shakes which I think are the most attractive, or they can be finished with ordinary asphalt shingles.

All windows should be triple glazed sealed units and must be installed flush with the exterior skin of the dome to prevent water from accumulating in window areas, especially if the window is in a sloped section.

Buckminster Fuller

Almost 30 years ago R. Buckminster Fuller, the architect, engineer and environmentalist, predicted that one day we would be living in domes. People laughed and called his ideas far out. But the economy and energy crunch today have proved him more prophet than theorist.

Dome homes are sprouting up in many parts of Canada, particularly here in the West. There are four or five in Maple Bay, near Duncan, and a couple in Metchosin.

Though these were designed and built bylocal people, several firms are making kits for the domed abodes.

In 1951 Fuller first patented his concept of a spherical building composed of a series of triangular panels. He argued that the housing concept would respond to the needs of a changing world. It elimiated expensive, load-bearing support walls and roof beams. It was faster and simpler to build than most conventional structures and used fewer building materials.

The dome also has proved to be energy-efficient for both heating and cooling, because it exposes one-third less surface area to the elements, compared with a conventional house. (Industry tests show a 30 percent to 50 percent energy saving for well-insulated domes.)

Fuller's dome went to fairs and exhibitions, and it was adopted by industry. But for homes, acceptance has been slow in coming. Counterculture groups of the 1960s tried the concept for alternative shelters. Their self-styled domes developed leaky roofs and other problems, however, and produced more skepticism about the design.

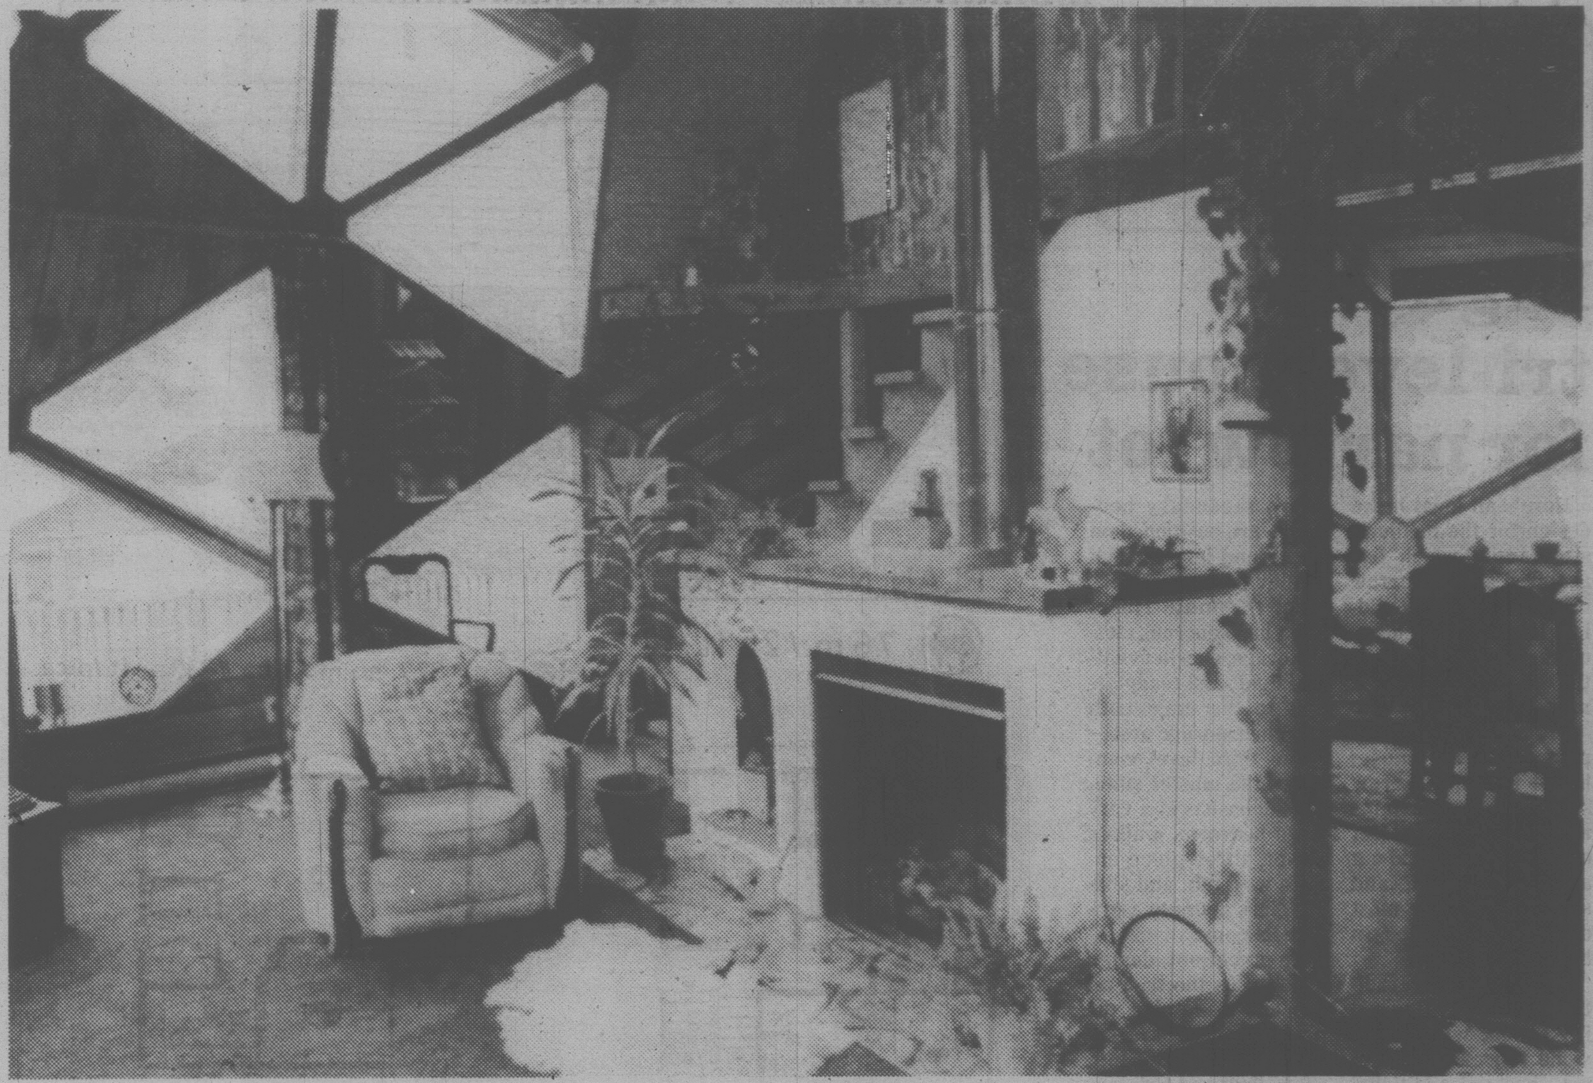
In the last four years the dome manufacturing technology has been developed and refined. Materials have been tested, calculations perfected and assembly techniques have been devised. A would-be dome owner now can buy a kit for a 1,000- to 4,000-square-foot home. The package for the shell costs $8,000 to $20,000. Plumbing, heating and electrical packages are extra, as are shingles and interior and exterior finishing materials.

(Costs for building a dome home can be close to that of constructing a conventional home unless the owners save labor costs by doing their own work.)

Most dome packages these days are designed to meet stringent building codes. Finding financing for dome homes has been hard in the past, but some banks and lending institutions now will provide mortgages.

Industry surveys show that about 90 percent of dome sales are for primary housing and only about 10 percent for vacation homes.

Of the leading American manufacturers, the largest is Cathedralite Domes Inc., at Aptos, California. Cathedralite reports that it has sold more than 2,500 domes in the last three years. The company pays royalties to inventor Fuller, although his geodesic-dome patents recently expired.



Maple Bay dome home has three levels, an open, airy feeling inside

By ANNE SWANNELL

Comprising 2,000 square feet on two and a half floors, this geodesic dome was not a kit, but was designed as it was built by The Fowlers. Bedrooms are on the first level; sitting room, dining room, and kitchen on the next. More rooms and a bathroom are on the loft level overlooking the sitting room.

They had come out from England in 1969, read two books on geodesic domes, testing the theories with straw models. (There are five methods of building a dome).

They bought land in Maple Bay and began to build in October of 1973. It turned out to be a long, wet winter, in which rain kept forming puddles in the temporary plastic covering. This had to be poked periodically from underneath with long poles which would sometimes puncture the plastic, letting deluges of water inside.

Interior finishing was complicated by conventional perpendicular walls meeting the multiplaned interior surface of the dome. Plumbing from the upstairs bathroom had to be concealed in a post that runs through the centre of the house.

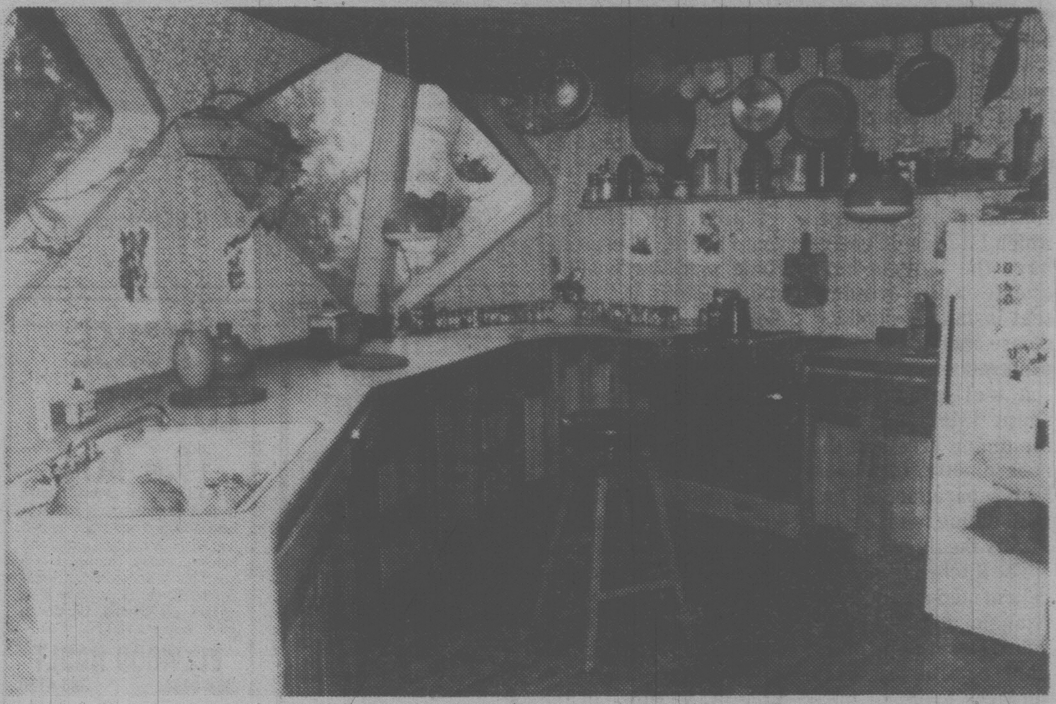
The Fowlers found the they let in too much heat during the summer, so the over-hanging roof was built to block the high summer sun.

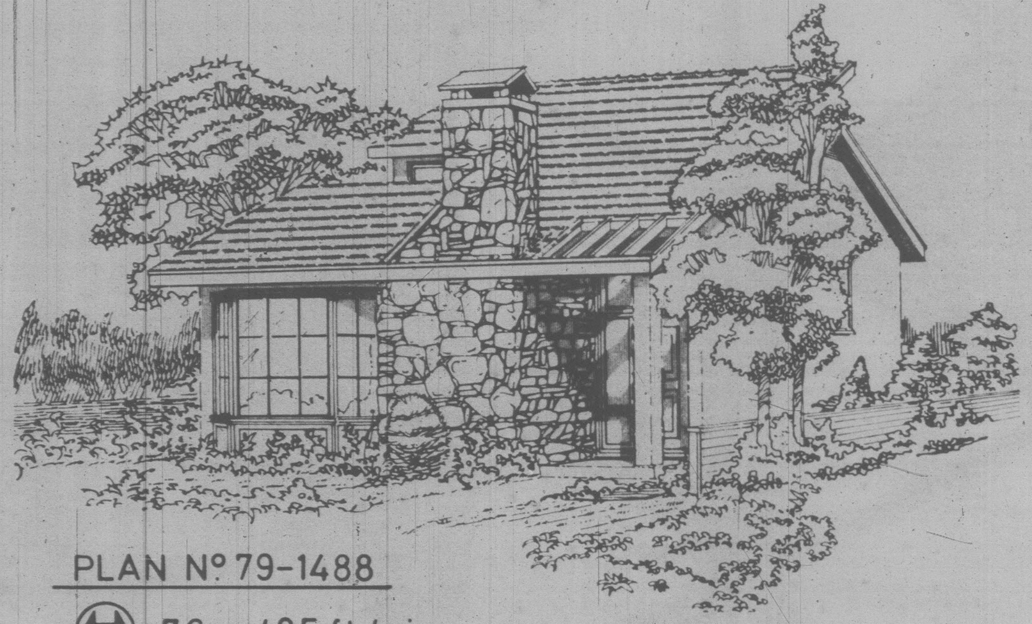
The Fowlers say their house will probably never be "finished". They have been working on it for seven years, and now they're thinking of adding a hexagonal family room. And of going solar to assist the heatalator type fireplace and electric baseboard heaters they have now.



Kitchen floor is second-hand oak hardwood taken from an old house in Vancouver, and shipped to them in boxes. Linda Fowler can indulge her penchant for wall-paper even though there are no large flat wall surfaces. In some rooms, such as the kitchen, shown here, all triangles are papered. Other rooms have some papered triangles, some finished with cedar strips.

PLAN OF THE WEEK

High style tri-level house for narrow lot



Here's an ideal home design for the medium-size family which has acquired a very narrow urban residential building lot, and which requires comfort and all the conveniences of a much larger home.

Although specifically planned as a compact home for the narrow site, the design contains almost 1,500 square feet of intelligently laid-out accommodations, and should please the most demanding tastes in housing.

The charmingly traditional exterior, finished in stucco, with fieldstone veneer and chimney, has the additional features of a wide front-facing bay window and a side patio and a private upper level balcony.

The covered main entry leads into a hall-like reception foyer and closet storage area, from whence traffic moves left to the large L-shape living-dining room combination.

The living room features a corner-positioned fireplace, for convivial at-homes, and a charming bay window, which later could easily have the built-in banquette-style window seat installed, should it please individual decor preference.

A well-planned U-shape kitchen divides the dining area and the nook/dinette, for excellent separation of formal dining and casual family meals.

The kitchen has an excellent step-saving work triangle, generous cupboard storage and abundant countertop work surfaces to make meal preparation chores a pleasure. The dinette connects to a side patio via sliding glass doors.

Two secondary bedrooms are positioned on the second level, which is elevated six risers from the main floor. Each has generous closet storage, excellent natural light, and ready access to the main bath and linen storage area.

The third level comprises the master suite, which consists of a very large bedroom, walk-in closet, three-piece ensuite with tub, and sliding glass doors to a private balcony.

An excellent design which uses the tri-level concept to resolve the problem of separation among entertaining, secondary and primary bedrooms.

Plans for design No. 79-1488 may be purchased either by the single set, at a cost of $85.00 for the first set and $14.00 for each additional set, or by the package.

A five-set plan package, including the first set, is economically priced at $120.00 and an eight-set package, also including the first set, is only $150.00.

Whichever method you choose, please include $5.00 for postage and handling. B.C. residents add 4% sales tax.

Send for the current edition of Select Home Designs magazine, Series 42, featuring imaginative decorating and home improvement ideas, plus 320 quality home plans of every type. Available for $2.75 ($2.00 plus .75 cents postage and handling).

To order any of these items please send cheque or money order payable to the Home of the Week. Address to: Home of the Week, 382 West Broadway, Vancouver, B.C., V5Y 1R2.

Away from home

An empty garage advertises your absence, so close the doors.

When going out at night, leave one or more interior lights on and perhaps have a radio playing. Timers may be purchased that will turn lights on and off.
